Calls Move to Take Passport Illegal.

ATHENS, Greece, Oct. 14.—Samuel Insull today began preparations for a lengthy sojourn in Athens. It is expected that his wife, who is now in Paris, may join him here. Except for the rainy season in November, the climate of Greece is not unfavorable for spending a pleasant winter.

At 8:30 o'clock tonight Insull emerged in a happy mood from a brief conference with his lawyer, Cristos Ladas, who apprised him of the legal technicalities of his status here following two outstanding events which took place today in the battle for his extradition to Chicago to face charges of larceny and embezzlement.

Refuses to Give up Passport.

The first of these events was that Insull, in a somewhat lengthy letter to American Consul Edwin Pitt, flatly refused to surrender his passport. Insull wrote and signed the letter himself, but he was aided in drafting it by his counsel. In the letter Insull argued that should he surrender his passport under present conditions, he would be put in a false position and he does not want to appear on the same footing as a passportless vagabond.

The second event was that the Greek foreign office completed a draft reply to acting Chargé d'Affaires Leland B. Morris' request last Monday asking for Insull's detention. In this reply, which was delivered to the American legation tonight, the Greek government is understood to state that under the existing laws of the country, and in view of the fact that instruments of ratification of the extradition treaty between the United States and Greece have not yet been exchanged, Insull cannot be arrested, detained or deported from Greece.

Text of Insull's Letter.

"Sir, I was very much surprised at your letter of yesterday informing me that the state department had instructed you to take up my passport.

"It seems that they don't know in Washington that my passport is valid until February, 1934, and that by its authority I can stay out of America in any country I choose.

"Since the passport was issued by the country of which I am a citizen, its withdrawal is impossible, especially while I am traveling through foreign countries.

"Because a genuine citizen is transformed by his own country, against every sense of its obligation, into a scamp who can neither stay anywhere nor go anywhere, withdrawal of a passport is equivalent to withdrawal of citizenship. Therefore, it is unnecessary for me to add that I cannot recognize your right to cancel my citizenship by surrendering to you my passport before its expiration.

Calls Proceedings Unlawful.

"Further than that, I protest vigorously because, contrary to the first duty to an American citizen who has lived honorably and whose life is a history of his own country, you try to deprive him indirectly of his citizenship, since withdrawal of a passport without any right has no other significance.

"I hope you will understand my grievance against proceedings which cannot be allowed by law, proceedings which have been repeated several times during my trip with a view to taking away my liberty against any law.

"I regret, while reserving all rights, not to be able to satisfy you."

Police Watch Movements.

Despite the refusal of the government to hold Insull, the Greek police, as a formality, are keeping a close watch on all his movements. Three or four plainclothes men have been assigned to watch him. This so annoyed Insull today that he refused to leave his hotel all day. He spent most of the time sitting in the hotel lounge, talking to newspaper men on a variety of subjects, but never with anything to say for publication.

Insull still is increasing the number of cigarets he smokes, but generally today he appeared more comforted and happy than yesterday. He complained to his lawyer tonight about the police guard over him, but was assured that it meant nothing and that even Premier Venizelos is guarded

ROOSEVELT HAS NEW POLICY ON VETERAN RELIEF

Early Statement Is Expected.

John Garner, speaking in New York, opens his vice presidential campaign with attack on President Hoover and his policies. Details on page 4.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—Relief for world war veterans who need relief instead of an immediate bonus payment to all veterans will be proposed by Franklin D. Roosevelt when he announces his position on the bonus, it was reported here today upon the governor's arrival from Albany.

The Democratic presidential nominee, who has been wrestling for weeks with the issue raised by the demands of the American Legion and other veterans' organizations for payment of the bonus, has been seeking a plan by which he could keep the good will of the veterans without granting the necessity for the bonus payment.

Plan Expected Soon.

In the last few days Gov. Roosevelt has considered a plan, which it is considered probable he will announce as his way of meeting the issue by which the federal government would set up machinery in all parts of the country to meet the needs of poverty stricken veterans and their families. The plan may be announced in the next day or two or during the candidate's southern tour which begins Tuesday.

According to the plan, the needy veterans could make application to these federal agencies and receive benefits during the periods of the emergencies confronting them.

Under such a plan, the enormous strain on the federal treasury which the immediate payment of the bonus would impose would be obviated, with the only expense to the government involved being what the governor feels is a national debt of honor anyway.

Points to Their Losses.

He has expressed the opinion that men who put their lives in danger for their country, and in many cases suffered actual economic losses because of that service while those who did not serve profited, are entitled to every consideration which the nation justly can afford to give.

But the governor on at least one occasion has declared that the federal treasury in its present condition could not possibly suffer the drain which payment of the bonus would put upon it, and that before such a payment can be considered, the huge deficit piled up by the administration must be liquidated.

The plan credited to the governor contemplates the setting up of the old draft boards which operated during the war and which it is believed could quickly be brought into play now to receive the applications of veterans, and to make recommendations for their relief.

The President has the power, under a wartime measure passed by congress, to summon the national council for defense into session during any grave national emergency, and the council has authority to reappoint the old draft boards, or to create new ones, which could function locally as units of the national council.

Just such an action was proposed by the American Legion at its convention in Detroit in 1931, not for the purpose of meeting the demands of the veterans for relief but for the more general purpose of countering the effects of the depression and to set in motion plans for restoring prosperity.

The governor is reported to have been advised that the American Legion leadership probably would welcome such a plan as is under consideration as a fair means of meeting the urgent demands of the veterans' local organizations.

Favors Some Compensation.

The governor's advisers have followed him in a position of holding that when young Americans volunteered for service, or were drafted into war from peace time pursuits, they lost high wages and continuous employment of which those men and women who stayed behind reaped the benefits. Mr. Roosevelt is said to be convinced that some measure of compensation be given in instances where injustice has resulted.

The method of funding such a plan as has been described might be the

Americans in Paris Defend Their Women

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Oct. 14.—American male inhabitants of Montparnasse rose in defense of their women tonight and filed 12 complaints for defamation of character against the manager of a popular café in the Latin quarter because he barred all Americans on the plea that American women conduct themselves scandalously.

The café is Lipp's famous for good Alsatian beer, just opposite the old church St. Germain des Pres. Incidentally the same management operates the Balzar bar, also in the students' quarter, which is operated upon old fashioned French bourgeois principles and does not admit women without escorts.

American Gets Beating.

For both the Americans and Manager Tace the trouble began last Tuesday, but the accounts differ slightly. The Americans say that they were served beer at 1:55 a. m. and were told to drink it quickly because the place was closing at 2.

"I am not a pig and I can't swill beer down like that," one member of the party said in English.

The waiter understood just one English word of that sentence. It was "pig." Feeling that he had been insulted, he called his comrades and with their aid the American was beaten, the entire party was thrown out, invited to stay away and instructed to tell all their compatriots that they were not wanted either.

Manager Tace says that the party became intoxicated and slugged the waiter without provocation. Whatever happened, Americans became decidedly unpopular.

Last night James O. Clark of the Moviegraph company, his wife and a Harold Smith of movieland entered Lipp's.

"It is useless to sit down," a waiter said. "You will not be served."

Clark asked why.

"I don't care to serve you when you are with a woman of that type," Manager Tace spoke up.

Clark Protests Insult.

"I can't help it," the manager said. "All American women look quite loose to me. I can't be bothered with telling them apart. Anyway, American women drink too much."

The Americans left quietly, but today a group of 20, wishing to test out the case against Americans, entered the café. Despite the presence of four French army officers in the party, waiters refused to serve them.

The Americans refused to leave, so 17 policemen were called and escorted the Americans to a nearby police station. There 12 complaints were sworn out against Tace for defamation of character, including one by Clark, two by Frenchmen and one by a Russian.

BEATTY VISITS POLICE IN SEARCH OF EXCITEMENT

Admiral Lord Beatty, hero of the battle of Jutland, appeared at the detective bureau at 11th and State streets last night and announced that "he was in search of something exciting." He was accompanied by one of his sons.

Lieut. Albert Hoffman, supervising squad leader, greeted Lord Beatty in the absence of Deputy Chief of Detectives Walter Storms. "If you didn't get your fill of excitement during the war I am afraid Chicago can offer you nothing in that line," Lieut. Hoffman told the visitor.

In the hope that "something would turn up" Lord Beatty and his son accompanied Sergt. Hugh Smith and his squad on a tour of the south side "black belt" and the near southwest side.

While the admiral was with Sergt. Smith's squad they received a radio call of a shooting at 2948 Vernon avenue and the car sped there. The owner of the building told police he had seen two burglars trying to get into a store on the first floor and had fired three shots at them. The burglars fled.

Earlier in the day Lord Beatty was the chief guest at a reception given by the English Speaking union at the Tavern club, 333 North Michigan avenue. Other guests were Maj. Gen. Frank Parker and his chief of staff, Col. William H. Burt; Rear Admiral Wat T. Cluverius; the British consul general, Lewis Bernays, and Charles S. Dewey.

Slain by Bandit Who Holds Up Card Players

Ten men were playing cards early today in an apartment in the Du Pont hotel at 5047 Kenmore avenue when there was a knock at the door. Then an armed man entered and announced that it was a holdup.

One of the players resisted and hurled a chair at the intruder. The bandit fired at him and one of the bullets struck him in the head, fatally wounding him. He died a few minutes later. The bandit fled without obtaining any loot.

Identified at Hospital.

The victim was identified at the Edgewater hospital as William Diffenbaugh, 33 years old, 4153 Broadway, a Yellow cab driver.

Merritt Tallman, the night clerk, told the police that two bandits had entered the hotel and compelled him to give up $25 from the till. Then, while one of the bandits remained in the lobby the other forced him to lead the way to the room where the card game was in progress. The attempted holdup and shooting followed.

Players Held for Questioning.

All Diffenbaugh's companions were held for questioning and taken to the Town Hall police station. They declared that they had never seen the robber before. They added that it was their custom to gather every Friday night in the rooms of Harry Nelson in the hotel and play a friendly game of poker. Nelson is missing. The other men were nearly all cab drivers.

STOCKS ADVANCE ON REPORT ROOSEVELT DISAPPROVES BONUS

New York, Oct. 14.—[Special.]—Stocks advanced sharply and on a broad front today as reports reached Wall street that Gov. Roosevelt soon will express his disapproval of an outright soldiers' bonus. The net gains in pivotal issues ranged from 2 to 5 points. There was a lively advance also in bonds and commodities.

Since President Hoover's opposition to the bonus is already known, Wall street felt assured that any movement at the next session to make a cash payment to the ex-service men would be defeated.

The upturn on the stock exchange was accelerated by the strong markets for wheat, cotton and other staples. The leading stocks were pushed forward in spectacular fashion in the afternoon.

American Telephone and Telegraph closed with a net gain of 5¾ points, Santa Fe was up 4½ points, Auburn 6½, J. I. Case 5½, and U. S. Steel 4.

Two wire tappers who had connected their lines to the telephone of Michael Galvin, secretary-treasurer of the Teamsters, Chauffeurs and Helpers' union, were arrested last evening in a third floor flat at 932 West Madison street. The headquarters of the union, and Galvin's office, are at 934 West Madison.

Early today assistant state's attorneys and the police were still striving to find out what became of five large notebooks which one of the wire tappers declared had been filled with conversation over a period of four months and which were in the room when the raid was made. These records were said to have been taken by Galvin. He first admitted, and then denied, that he had them.

Two Men Under Arrest.

Those under arrest are Henry Brown, 53 years old, and his brother-in-law, Joseph Hebert, 39 years old. Brown's wife, Edna, also was taken into custody, but was released. The men admitted that they were employed by the G. A. Seagrove company, 33 South Dearborn street, as investigators and this was confirmed by the manager of the concern, Homer G. Wright.

"But," added Wright in a telephone conversation with Supervising Captain Stege of the Fourth police division, "ask Lieut. Frank Johnson of the detective bureau about it. He knows what we are doing."

Capt. Stege called Lieut. Johnson to the Des Plaines street station and received a prompt denial that the detective bureau knew anything about the wire tapping, or about the employes of the Seagrove agency. The captain then hopefully turned to the Secret Six for information, if they had any.

Call Secret Six Investigators.

To the station went Alexander Jamie, chief investigator of the Six With him was Mrs. Shirley Kub, who in March, 1931, was a special investigator for the then commissioner of police, John H. Alcock. In that capacity she had refused to testify before the grand jury until Judge John P. McGoorty, investigating police graft, sentenced her to four months in jail for contempt.

Both Jamie and Mrs. Kub, after viewing the prisoners, declared they had never seen them. As for wire tapping—O, certainly not. So the puzzled police called Manager Wright at his home and asked him to please come in and tell them what he meant by hiring wire tappers and for whom he was working.

He promised that he would, but after several hours he called and said that his attorney, Lloyd Heth, has advised him not to appear. Informed that he would be brought in if he didn't come willingly, he agreed to appear at the state's attorney's office today and tell his story. It was then 2 a. m. and the investigation was temporarily dropped.

It was explained during the evening that Galvin became suspicious that his wires were tapped and notified the telephone company. The company experts then traced the wires and found the tap led to Brown's flat. According to the police, they were not called to make the raid. Policemen Frank McCormick and Roger Powers went to the flat when they heard there was trouble there.

Mystery of the Records.

In the flat were Galvin and several telephone employes, they said. Galvin had the records, apparently. He first said that they were turned over by him to his attorney, Ald. James R. Quinn. Mr. Quinn said he knew nothing of the matter.

Brown said that he and his brother-in-law had been listening on the tapped wire for about four months. About a dozen pages of crudely written notes were found under a stove in the flat, but Assistant State's Attorneys Thomas Johnson and Harry Ditchburne reported there was nothing important recorded in them.

A plot to dispose of counterfeit gold bonds totaling many thousands of dollars was uncovered by detectives yesterday with the arrest of eight men. A lawyer, a broker, an insurance man, an office manager, and several police characters were among the prisoners.

The arrests were the result of several weeks of investigation by Lieut. Frank Johnson and his squad of the detective bureau. He ordered the booking last night of Attorney Maurice L. Hill, with offices at 201 North Wells street; Jacob Keno, 5743 North Spaulding avenue, former office manager of the Coty Perfume company, and Leo Goodman, insurance man at 166 West Washington boulevard, on charges of conspiracy and possession of counterfeit bonds. Keno already was facing a charge of embezzlement from his former employers, having been arrested on this charge on Tuesday night.

The other prisoners are Charles Fried, 3400 West 16th street, known as an extortionist; Samuel Chernoff, 5229 Montrose avenue; Schum and Harry Hill, brothers of Attorney Hill, and Lester Robinson, 1255 North State street, who was a La Salle street broker until the stock market crash.

Writs Filed for Captives.

Lieut. Johnson said his hand was forced in the investigation when writs of habeas corpus were filed for the prisoners immediately after their arrest. Chief of Detectives William Schoemaker appeared before Chief Justice John Prystalski, before whom the writs were filed, and pleaded for time, declaring that the men were authors of a plot to sell large amounts of forged bonds.

The judge dismissed the writ and ordered the police to file charges against the men or release them at noon today. Booking of three of the men followed and charges may be preferred against the others this morning.

Attorney Hill, Keno, Goodman and Chernoff were arrested as they left the safety deposit vaults in the Straus building, Michigan and Jackson boulevards. They had just deposited forged gold bonds of the Consolidated Gas company of New York totaling $100,000 in Keno's safety deposit box. Lieut. Johnson obtained a search warrant, broke open the box and obtained 200 bonds of $500 denomination, which were termed forgeries by officials of the American Bank Note company, which printed the original bonds.

Gets Clew After Robbery.

Lieut. Johnson was assigned several months ago to investigate the robbery of the Becker-McNair company, stockyards commission merchants, of $25,000 in bonds and some cash. He was informed by Mr. Becker of that concern that Attorney Hill had telephoned him and offered to bring about the return of the bonds.

Attorney Hill had an office at 188 West Randolph street at that time and from then on he was watched and all visitors to his office were trailed. He later moved his office to 201 North Wells street.

The police at first believed that they had found the gang which plotted the huge tax warrant forgeries some time ago. There is still a possibility, it was said, that the men arrested were involved in that plot, although no direct evidence against them in this connection has been obtained.

Among the conversations overheard by the police were discussions of bond forgeries in the amounts of one to ten millions of dollars. References were made to an expert printer, who printed the forged bonds from steel plates. This printer is being sought.

Suspect Quizzed, Then Freed.

Last Monday night Fried was arrested. He was not told that he was suspected in connection with Hill and the others, but was questioned perfunctorily and then released. He went immediately to Hill's office, where he told the attorney, according to police, that the forged bonds must be placed in a safe place.

The intensive watch was kept up, and yesterday Hill, Goodman, and Keno went to the Straus building vaults, where they were arrested and the forged bonds obtained.

Lieut. Johnson said that the scheme whereby the gang planned to dispose of the bonds was one not hitherto known to the police. The men would get in touch with some office man, preferably an insurance company clerk or trusted employé who had access to the vaults where bonds were kept. This man would give the forgers a list of long term bonds held in the vaults. These bonds would be forged and the employé would then substitute the forgeries for the good bonds.

Pick Long Term Bonds.

Lieut. Johnson pointed out that the gang apparently chose the long term bonds with the idea of delaying detection. The forged bonds found in Keno's vault were to mature in 1945.

The counterfeiter for the gang was said to be able to turn out 1,500 forged bonds a day, according to his confederates.

Keno was arrested Tuesday night and confessed to the embezzlement of $20,000 from the Coty Perfume company, where he was bookkeeper and office manager for eight years. He was released on bond and watched in the hope that he would involve his confederates in the bond forgery plot.

"There are undoubtedly others involved," said Lieut. Johnson. "We hope to get at them. It appears from the evidence we have thus far uncovered that Hill was the middleman, Keno the promoter, and Fried the contact man. The big problem of the gang was to secure contacts with employés in big companies who could have access to the safety deposit boxes of their companies."

2 WARSHAWSKYS ARE SENTENCED FOR CONTEMPT

Arthur Warshawsky, 53 years old, and his son, Charles, 27 years old, owners of Warshawsky & Warshawsky, Inc., an automobile parts and accessories business at 3220 Ogden avenue, were sentenced to four months each in the county jail for contempt of court yesterday by Superior Judge Denis E. Sullivan. The judge ruled that the men had violated a court order which prevented them from advertising their business without explaining that they had no connection with Warshawsky & Co., another auto parts and accessories chain store concern. The judge fined the Warshawsky & Warshawsky corporation $500.

The two Warshawskys were taken into court by Israel Warshawsky, brother of the elder defendant, who is owner of Warshawsky & Co. It was brought out in court that in 1919 Israel and Arthur Warshawsky were competitors in the same business. Israel bought out his brother for $16,000. A year later Arthur Warshawsky returned to the business. In 1929 Israel Warshawsky obtained the court order which directed that his brother display signs stating that his business was not connected with that of his brother. He charged violation of this order.

The two defendants were granted stays of sentence pending an appeal.

CHARGE KREUGER BROTHER'S FIRM JUGGLED BOOKS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 14.—After remaining all night in a prison cell under special guard, Thorsten Kreuger, brother of the late Ivar Kreuger, who was arrested yesterday, was again subjected to intensive questioning throughout the day concerning the administration of the Hobroforsen company, of which he was the head.

Receivers for the bankrupt company are to be present a report Monday. It was stated today that the company's books were kept to show fictitious profits.

A statement published in an evening paper declares that the bookkeeping was similar to that of Ivar Kreuger's companies. The Hobroforsen company seems to have been "a nursery where the particular methods of the Kreuger swindle were tried out and tested," the paper said.

Thorsten Kreuger during the last ten years created a gigantic concern of Swedish undertakings with share capital amounting to more than $35,000,000. He has the chief interest in two banks, the Sydsvenska and the Hjo, and interests in several other companies, one of which is bankrupt, and three newspapers.

PARENTS ASK MAYOR TO KEEP SCHOOLS OPEN

Mayor Cermak was told yesterday by a delegation of women who represented 180 parent-teacher association groups, with a membership of 39,000, that they were depending on his help to obtain pay for school teachers and to keep the schools open. After he had explained the tax situation they indicated that they would help in the collection of delinquent taxes.

The delegation said the parents of school children are interested in getting permanent relief for the school employés and in keeping the schools open as a safeguard for their children. The spokeswomen were Mrs. Elsie Stephenson, 8022 Harper avenue, and Mrs. John J. Oros, 6009 West End avenue.

"I am doing all I can to reduce city government costs and therefore your taxes," said the mayor, "and I will do all I can to keep the schools from closing. By next spring I will have appointed a majority of the members of the board of education and then you can rest assured that everything that can possibly be done for the welfare of your children will be done."

BANKER FLOWER GIVES UP TO SERVE TERM IN PRISON

Alexander Flower, chairman of the board of the defunct Roosevelt Bankers State bank, surrendered at the sheriff's office yesterday to start serving a sentence of one to ten years in Joliet penitentiary for making false statements to bank examiners. Flower pleaded guilty in his trial in the Criminal court of Judge Philip L. Sullivan and was given a 60 day stay of mittimus to straighten out his affairs. The prosecution showed that Flower made loans of bank funds to himself, his brother and others, and that little of the $1,000,000 in deposits remained for the 22,000 depositors when the bank closed.

Evanston Community Chest Files Organization Papers

The Evanston Community Chest, Inc., filed a certificate of organization with County Recorder Clayton F. Smith yesterday, asserting that it had been organized to correlate welfare work in the north shore suburb, to raise funds for affiliated charities and social agencies and to assist in all welfare and social service work. The directors are five Evanston residents: Wirt Wright, 1601 Orrington avenue; Ernest Palmer, 1229 Hinman avenue; Graham Patterson, 1420 Davis street; E. E. Sheridan, 310 Church street; and Lewis C. Walker, 1630 Judson avenue. The Chest will be located at 1601 Orrington avenue, Evanston.

SWANSON'S AIDS START EAST FOR INSULL'S REFUGE

International Battle Will Open in Washington.

Assistant State's Attorneys Charles A. Bellows and Andrew J. Vlachos were en route to Washington last night to begin the international battle to return Samuel Insull to Chicago. Athens, where Insull has taken refuge, is their ultimate destination.

The prosecutors took with them certified copies of the indictments charging Insull with larceny and embezzlement, as well as transcripts of the testimony of two brokers and an auditor, on which the indictments were partly based. Transcripts of other testimony, to be taken next Tuesday before Chief Justice John Prystalski in Criminal court, will be forwarded to them in Greece.

Four Days in Washington.

The prosecutors plan to spend four days in Washington, familiarizing themselves with the diplomatic procedure surrounding the Insull extradition case. They will sail from New York for Naples aboard the Italian liner Rex next Wednesday. They hope to reach Athens a fortnight later.

Meanwhile, attorneys for holders of $60,000,000 of debentures of the bankrupt Insull Utility Investments, Inc., ran into difficulty in their effort to uncover assets for the creditors at a bankruptcy hearing before Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley.

Five loop bankers had been summoned to testify. All of them sent substitutes. After several hours' inconclusive examination of the witnesses available, Judge Lindley continued the hearing to Nov. 1.

Hearing on Injunction.

Counsel for the debenture holders had previously expressed hope that their examination of the bankers might be concluded by Oct. 19, on which date the New York federal court had set a hearing on the dissolution of an injunction restraining five New York banks from selling securities of Insull Utility Investments, pledged by the company as collateral for loans which, the debenture holders claim, were illegally negotiated.

C. E. Ronning, assistant auditor of the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, was one of the witnesses questioned, appearing in place of James R. Leavell, president of that bank. Isaac Mayer, counsel for the bank, informed the court he had taken the liberty to advise Mr. Leavell that he need not appear, providing he held himself in readiness to be called by telephone from his office.

Two Familiar With Case.

Only two men in the Continental bank were thoroughly familiar with Insull affairs, Mr. Ronning thought. He named Herman Waldeck, executive vice president, and Abner J. Stilwell, executive vice president, adding that both were away with receivers of the Middle West Utilities company on an inspection tour.

As an afterthought Mr. Ronning suggested that Joseph Overlock, auditor of the Continental, might be able to cast some light on Insull loans. Lewis J. Jacobson and Harold F. White, counsel for the petitioning creditors, wanted Mr. Overlock summoned at once.

"Mr. Overlock is in the banking department," Attorney Mayer demurred. "He had nothing to do with making loans.

"But we can't wait until these other men get back to town," Attorney Jacobson remonstrated.

Resent Intimation.

"It's not our fault if they are not here," snapped Mr. Mayer. "The bank set fifty or sixty men at work last night gathering the data you have asked for. We resent any intimation that we are not coöperating."

With a remark that they had "intimated" nothing, attorneys Jacobson and White dropped the subject.

Charles F. Nelson, cashier of the Northern Trust company, was next to be called.

"Suppose that Samuel Insull Jr. asked the Commercial National bank of New York for a loan and referred that bank to the Northern Trust company as a reference," Mr. Jacobson suggested. "To what department of the Northern Trust would the New York bank apply for information?"

"To the credit department," said Mr. Nelson.

Debentures for Customers.

George F. Spaulding, vice president of the Northern Trust, testified that his bank had bought some of the Insull Utility Investment debentures for its customers, but offered no further information of a significant character.

On a general agreement that information sought by the petitioning creditors would be assembled within two weeks, the hearing was set ahead to Nov. 1. The data the attorneys indicated they were seeking include information on the amounts of coupon payments and collections on the $60,000,000 debenture issue; debenture purchases by New York banks; debentures sales by the New York banks, and interbank correspondence, statements, and surveys concerning the debentures.

PREDICT EXTRADITION

Washington, D. C., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—State department officials expressed confidence today that arrangements can be effected shortly for the return to the United States of Samuel Insull, former Chicago utility executive now a fugitive from justice in Greece. While admitting that Mr. Insull's refusal to turn over his passport voluntarily to the American legation at Athens had to a certain extent upset their plans, officials were of the opinion that his extradition to this country was only a matter of time.

Although no announcement was made regarding steps now being taken to secure Insull's passport, there were indications that the state department is prepared to order the document invalidated if such a step is necessary to prevent Mr. Insull's escape. Officials here do not anticipate that Mr. Insull will attempt to flee from Greece at once. It was learned, however, that steps are being taken to keep the department in touch with Insull should he decide to leave Athens.

Can Take Up Passport.

Officials at the department today explained that under the law the secretary of state has authority to take up any passport for cause regardless of whether or not the holder is traveling through a foreign country. A passport, it was said, is nothing more or less than a letter addressed to all foreign countries in which the secretary of state requests that the bearer, an American, be given all aid and assistance necessary in foreign lands.

A passport, an official said, is supposed to be issued only to citizens in good standing. The secretary of state, it was added, has full authority to issue or to decline to issue passports. Thus the secretary of state has full authority to take up a man's passport if he becomes a fugitive from justice. As the secretary has full right to grant passports he therefore has the right to take them up, it was argued.

Would Permit Return.

Attention was called to section one of the act of July 1, 1926, which provides that "no one but the secretary of state may grant and issue passports in the United States and he is empowered to refuse them in his discretion."

In cases where passports are taken up the usual practice is to amend the passport to permit the holder to return directly to the United States. The document then is returned to the owner.

JERITZA REFUSES TO PAY $24,000 GEM BILL; SUED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, Oct. 14.—The troubles of Mme. Maria Jeritza, opera singer, who purchased $24,000 worth of jewelry from a dealer here two years ago and then decided that she could not pay for them after the Metropolitan Opera company failed to renew her contract this year, came before a court again today.

The diva did not appear and was represented by lawyers. Mme. Jeritza's defense is that she was overcharged for the jewelry, which included four diamond bracelets and several diamond rings. The judge ordered experts to appraise the value of the jewels.

Mme. Jeritza has offered to pay for the jewelry in Austrian schillings, which have depreciated 15 per cent, but the jewelers are demanding American dollars.

by the police. That answer seemed to amuse and mollify the old man, but he still refused to go out tonight for a short auto drive.

Venizelos Faces Ouster.

One thing that may upset present calculations is that a cabinet crisis is pending here, which may come to a head next week with the result that Venizelos and the present government may be out and another party in power, which might want to take a different decision. Insull manifested great interest in the outcome of this situation.

Reports that Sir Basil Zaharoff, mysterious Greek financial power, is lending his influence to aid Insull could not be reduced to any tangibility. Insull advisers denied that Zaharoff had interested himself in the fate of the Chicagoan or in making his stay in Greece uninterrupted.

It is admitted, however, that any representations from Zaharoff would carry weight with the Greek government, as Greece expects eventually to get a bequest from the Zaharoff estate. Zaharoff is now in Paris. He has not been in Greece for years.

Face Weeks of Delay.

As the situation now stands, nothing further can be done in the procedure against Insull for several weeks. First of all instruments of ratification of the extradition treaty must be exchanged, and the exchange, according to the terms of the treaty, must take place in Washington. This means that the time of exchange depends on the Greek government. And until that exchange is effected, no extradition order can be sent from Washington.

Even afterwards the procedure is long and involved. The Illinois courts must issue a writ and request extradition from the attorney general, who in turn passes it to the secretary of state. Then the state department forwards it to the Greek foreign office, which in turn passes it along to the ministry of interior, which passes it to the ministry of justice here.

The justice department then asks the high court for an opinion. Whatever that opinion is, it is then relayed back through the same route until police finally are requested to act. This indicates in a measure to what delay the law's procedure is subjected.

Insull Awaits Election.

Meanwhile, Insull is hoping that the elections will have taken place in the United States and that something will break in his favor or that attention will be distracted from his dramatic flight.

Insull's advisers denied that Mrs. Insull is acting for him in Paris or that she had sent him $25,000 last Monday. What worries Insull now in Greece mostly is the late hours of the country. He can't get any dinner until about 8:30 p. m., which he considers an hour and a half too late.

Insull's lawyer cannot speak English and Insull knows no Greek. The difficulty was solved by a wealthy Greek from Stamford, Conn., now visiting his home country and staying at Insull's hotel, who volunteered his services as an interpreter.

Scores of communications and personal calls are received by Insull daily from various Greeks offering their services in one way or another.

Warm Friends Since They Met Here in 1921.

The solicitude shown by the Greek government for Samuel Insull, as revealed in dispatches from Athens where Insull fled to escape extradition, has occasioned no surprise among Chicago Greeks.

In offering Insull the most comfortable room in the Athens police headquarters during his one night detention, in releasing him from custody against the implied wish of the American state department, and in construing the Greek-American extradition treaty as nonapplicable to Insull, it was revealed that the Greek government was simply repaying courtesies which Insull once extended to the Greek premier, Eleutherios Venizelos.

Peter S. Lambros, editor of the Greek Star, recalled the occasion eleven years ago when Venizelos became Insull's debtor. The situation of the two men then was almost the reverse of what it is today, Mr. Lambros said.

An Exile from Greece.

"It was in October, 1921," he recalled. "King Constantine had reascended the throne of Greece and the liberal statesman, Venizelos, had been driven into exile. He came to New York and planned a tour of the country, but did not include Chicago on his itinerary."

The local Greek colony was disappointed, Mr. Lambros said. An appeal was made to Insull and several hundred other Chicago leaders, who sent the exiled statesman an invitation which brought him here on Oct. 21, 1921. Insull was head of a delegation of fifteen that met him at the station.

"Mr. Insull, then president of the Commercial club, invited Venizelos to address that body," Mr. Lambros said. "The premier had to decline, but accepted Insull's invitation to be a guest at the Insull home. Insull asked me to supply him a biography of Venizelos so that he would be able to entertain him intelligently."

Premier Praises Insull.

When Venizelos left Chicago his highest praises went to Insull as a host, Mr. Lambros said. He carried with him the letter of invitation which had brought him here, bound as a souvenir. Mr. Lambros, who is a personal friend of Venizelos, said nothing had occurred since the premier's visit to disturb the warm friendship between the two men.

Present political conditions in Greece are such, however, that Insull may lose the influence of his powerful friend at any time, Mr. Lambros said. In the last election the Royalists gained 100 seats in the Greek parliament, matching the number held by Venizelos' followers and leaving the balance of power with fifty deputies of minor factions.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BARRIE, Ont., Oct. 14.—Extradition proceedings against Martin J. Insull, wanted in Chicago on indictments charging him with embezzlement and larceny from the utility companies which his brother, Samuel, once controlled, were postponed today until Nov. 4.

Insull did not come to Barrie from the boarding house at Orillia, 23 miles from here, where he has been living, for the extradition hearing. He was represented at the hearing before Judge Dudley Holmes of Simcoe county by Attorney J. C. McRuer. E. W. Bayly, deputy attorney general of the province of Ontario, appeared to represent the state of Illinois and agreed to the postponement.

Insull's bail of $50,000, on which he was released after he had spent 48 hours in the jail here following his arrest on Oct. 6 on a provisional warrant, will expire on Nov. 4, the date of the next hearing.

New Appeals Board Holds First Hearings.

George F. Nixon and Fred W. Brummel, members of the newly constituted board of tax appeals, held their first hearing yesterday.

They first issued a statement in which they said: "We are determined that a fair and equitable assessment of all classes of taxable property shall prevail, and that both personal and real property contribute its just and fair share to the duty of maintaining the government."

Grant Reductions in Levies.

Then they sat down to hear complaints against 1931 personal property assessments from the towns of Bloom, Leyden, Oak Park, River Forest, and Riverside. They ended their first day's work with the following standing:

Complaints heard	41
Assessments confirmed	9
Assessments reduced	15
Assessments canceled	11
Kept under advisement	6
Assessments raised	None

The complaints covered assessments totaling $68,997. At the end of the day the two board members had left $9,806 of this total standing on the assessment rolls. They had wiped off valuations totaling $11,312. The remaining $47,506 in assessments were kept under advisement pending investigation by Assessor J. L. Jacobs of the reductions claimed by the six complainants involved.

Although George Forbes, 752 Franklin street, River Forest, admitted failure to schedule his membership in the Chicago Board of Trade, Mr. Nixon did not include that in his schedule of assessable property, and granted him a small reduction on other items. He protested an assessment of $692.

Mr. Nixon, examining the sworn schedule of property which each taxpayer is required to submit as part of his complaint, asked why the Board of Trade membership had not been scheduled.

"Why, it was never assessed before," replied Forbes.

Auto Found Overvalued.

Mr. Nixon also brought out that Forbes owns a piano valued at $200 which he omitted. This, however, was not included in the assessment as reduced by the board. A reduction to $665 was granted Forbes when J. Fred Bollman, who represented Assessor Jacobs, admitted an automobile owned by Forbes might have been overvalued.

James B. McDougal, governor of the Chicago Federal Reserve bank, who lives at 104 Riverside road, Riverside, protested that his personal property assessment of $18,500 was excessive. Like a number of other complainants, he testified that the assessment was an estimate made by the township assessor without visiting his home.

Disagree on Valuation.

Mr. Bollman refused to accept the valuation of $5,000 which Mr. McDougal made in his complaint, and the case was taken under advisement pending a reassessment by Assessor Jacobs' deputies.

Frank X. Mudd, 220 North Scoville avenue, Oak Park, a retired automobile dealer who was made a Knight of St. Gregory in 1925 after he had given $100,000 for St. Mary's of the Lake seminary at Mundelein, protested that his personal property assessment of $20,000 was grossly excessive. Mr. Bollman defended it, and a reassessment was ordered.

A reassessment also was ordered in the case of Dr. Blaine W. Claypool, 1043 Fairoaks avenue, Oak Park, who complained against an assessment of $5,550.

Hearings Reveal Errors.

Mr. Bollman, whose part at the hearings is to defend the assessments, consented to a number of the reductions and cancellations. Most of the cancellations resulted from errors made by the country town assessors, who had assessed the same property at different addresses, or had assessed persons whose names appear in the telephone directory but who appeared and swore that they are living with relatives and have no assessable property of their own.

E. G. Schwenderman, 114 Keystone avenue, admitted he owns an old automobile, but obtained a cancellation of his $278 assessment on the plea that he is practically penniless and has applied for admission to a fraternal home.

Frederick Doyle, 542 Jackson avenue, River Forest, complained that his $270 schedule had been raised arbitrarily by the assessor to $943. He owns no automobile, he said, and his furniture is ten years old, yet his assessment is higher than those of a number of his neighbors who own expensive cars. His case was taken under advisement.

BREWERS' SCHOOL TO BE REOPENED AFTER 17 YEARS

The Wahl-Henius institute, 2374 Lincoln avenue, offering advanced courses to brew masters, will reopen on Oct. 17 with a registration of twenty brewery owners and managers. Dr. F. M. Du Pont, dean of the faculty, who lives at 1504 Central street, Wilmette, made this announcement last night. The school has been inactive since 1915.

"We are confident that the next congress will modify the Volstead act to permit the manufacture of healthful beer," Dr. Du Pont said. "Dr. Max Henius has been in Europe studying the latest developments in brewing and the students will have to work hard to catch up with the foreign brew masters."

Appropriate ceremonies will mark the opening of the institute. Dr. Du Pont and Dr. Henius, who is president of the institute, will make addresses at 3 o'clock and several Chicago brewers will present their views on the beer industry. Home brew makers need not apply, the institute officials said, because only men who have served a long apprenticeship and who have a serious interest in brewing will be considered for enrollment.

Hungry Children Must Share Cake at School

200 Underfed Pupils at Hawthorne.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

Margaret is 7 years old and looks 5. She is thin and poorly clad. When Margaret looks at you out of her large mournful eyes, you want to take her to the biggest restaurant in town and fill her up with steak, spinach and milk.

Margaret is in the second grade at Hawthorn school, 3300 Seminary avenue, and she has been waiting for the Hungry School Children's fund to open the free lunchroom again this year. But yesterday, a chocolate cup cake, thick with chocolate fudge icing, in some mysterious fashion came Margaret's way at the noon hour.

May Have Been a Teacher.

It is possible that a teacher had something to do with the disappearance of the cup cake from a bake goods sale in progress in the principal's office, under the auspices of the school's Parent-Teacher association.

The Hungry School Children's fund reporter looked around in time to see Margaret's eyes fall on that chocolate cup cake, a hesitant hand reach for it, pause, then lift the cake confidently toward a little girl nearby—Margaret's older sister—and a wide happy smile lighted both their faces.

"How many in your family," asked a teacher after both children had been supplied with milk and cake.

The teacher then told the story of how Margaret had been brought into the lunchroom last year and didn't stop eating until she had had four helpings. The school investigator found two children starving in the home and the mother of the baby faint from lack of food.

Too Proud to Beg.

"Last year with the help of the Hungry School Children's fund we fed 250 every day," said Mrs. Kate M. Flanagan. "This year we couldn't do the job ourselves so we didn't attempt to open the lunchroom. Many of the people are of Swedish descent in this neighborhood and were self supporting. Now out of work and with their savings gone, they are too proud to beg."

So hopeful is Mrs. Flanagan that aid will come from the fund soon that she has a week's list of menus already made up. These call for beef stew, peanut butter sandwiches, vegetable soup, potato salad, cole slaw, macaroni, and plenty of milk.

"We hope we can feed over 200 who are desperately in need of hot lunches very soon," said Mrs. Flanagan. "We feel that the Hungry School Children's fund will save our children."

EVELYN, 10, GETS HER MAN AND A NEW RED WAGON

Evelyn Bystrom, 10 years old, 11145 Wallace street, didn't sit down and weep when an automobile struck her little red wagon Thursday near her home. The driver of the car failed to stop, but Evelyn wrote down the number of its license and went to the police and persuaded them to arrest the driver, Walter Kolinski, 2847 Farrell street, on a charge of reckless driving.

Yesterday, unaccompanied, she went to the South Chicago court and testified against Kolinski. She said that she didn't want him sent to jail, but that she did want her wagon fixed. Kolinski purchased a new wagon and the charge against him was dismissed by Judge Schiller.

PROMISES NEW BILL AGAINST BANK OFFICIAL

The mystery surrounding the $500,000 suit of James G. Clark of Mount Kisco, N. Y., against Norman W. Harris, an official of the Harris Trust and Savings bank, is expected to be dispelled by the amended bill which Attorney Lloyd Whitman said yesterday he would file within a few days on behalf of Clark.

He made the statement before Circuit Judge John R. Caverly, who set the case for trial on Jan. 16 after denying the motion of Attorney J. Fred Reeve, counsel for Harris, to dismiss the suit.

The bill which Clark now has on file charges that Harris agreed in August, 1931, to pay him $500 a month for life, but made no payments after a three month period.

Mrs. Dorothy Funk Clark, whom Clark married when they were students at the University of Wisconsin, divorced him last fall at Reno. Clark was awarded the custody of the two children and took them on a trip to Europe, from which he returned to take up residence at Mount Kisco.

COUNTY SEEKS RECEIVERS FOR 20 PROPERTIES

Edward M. Winston, special attorney for the county board, yesterday filed twenty suits in the Superior court asking receivers for income producing properties valued at more than $25,000,000. The purpose is to conserve funds to pay taxes amounting to $966,989 for the years 1927 to 1930.

The procedure has been authorized by the county commissioners, who have refused to compromise these taxes. The county already has a receiver in charge of the Aquitania apartments, a $2,000,000 property.

The suits filed yesterday named among others the following defendants: American Trust and Safe Deposit company, 125 North Dearborn street, taxes for years from 1927 to 1930 totaling $104,282; Lucia T. Waller, 31 West Wacker drive, taxes for 1929 and 1930, $105,398; Outer Drive Hotel corporation, 1725 East 53d street, 1929 and 1930, $69,717; Lake Shore Property corporation, 1765 East 55th street, 1928 to 1930, $86,257; and Mayfair Building corporation, 5496 Hyde Park boulevard, 1928 to 1930, $40,195.

BANK ROBBED OF $1,200.

Pennock, Minn., Oct. 14.—(AP)—A gunman who bound the hands and feet of Assistant Cashier Melvin Berglund robbed the State Bank of Pennock of $1,200 today and fled in an automobile. Berglund was alone in the bank.

Assails Tactics of Lawyers in Move for Tax Reduction

Hayden N. Bell, county tax attorney, yesterday denounced before County Judge Jarecki the tactics of Attorneys Roy D. Keehn and Morris Schaeffer in bringing a crowd of their clients in tax objection cases into the courtroom to urge Judge Jarecki to find some way of compromising the cases and granting them reductions.

"Things have come to a pretty pass," declared Attorney Bell, "if these tax strike cases, involving as they do the very life and continuance of local government in Chicago, are to be decided by cheer leading tactics instead of by the ordinary and legitimate arguments of counsel.

"Mr. Keehn and Mr. Schaeffer have lost their case [the Cisar case] in the Supreme court of this state. They haven't a leg to stand on, and now they are appealing to the Athenian democracy, that Athenian democracy which one day forced the cup of hemlock upon Socrates and on the next demonstrated its fickleness by enthroning him in the halls of fame.

Demands End of Tax Strike.

"The only way to break the present tax strike is to bring the cases adjudicated in the Supreme court to judgment. When they're carried to judgment, clients know that they have received no service and counsel lose hope of fees."

Mr. Bell then turned his argument to the legal phase of the plea of the tax objectors that their tax bills be compromised.

"If particular property is assessed too high," he said, "and fraudulently so, the courts of Illinois and the United States will grant reductions to the general body of taxes.

"Where property is assessed uniformly within its class or within the general level of assessments, the omission or undervaluation of other property, or another class of property, gives no right to a reduction of the level of the general body of taxes to what the level would have been if all property had been uniformly assessed.

Remedies for Tax Errors.

"The sole remedies for the omission or undervaluation of other property are proceedings before the assessing bodies to compel proper assessments, civil or criminal action against assessing officers, or political action at the polls in the election of better officers, or abolition of existing officers by law.

"To attempt to lower the general level of the body of taxes to give relief to individuals would be like lowering the surface of the earth to get a man out of a well. The individual might be relieved, but the world he wanted to live in would be destroyed in the process of rescue. Such relief is incompatible with the necessities of governments, and is impossible.

Cites Court Decision.

"Ninety-nine per cent of all the tax litigation now pending in all the courts is based upon the erroneous theory that the body of taxes can be lowered to cover taxes lost in the omission or undervaluation of other property. The decision Monday of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in the case of the American Mutual Liability Insurance company vs. County Treasurer McDonough is just another decision added to recent decisions of courts of last resort, state and national, holding that the collection of taxes cannot be stopped and government destroyed by the failure of assessing officers to assess all assessable property with uniformity."

Judge Jarecki continued the case before him until Oct. 21. The case involves a request by various tax attorneys that he set for trial an individual case in which a determination would be made of how much of the tax bill in question is illegal and excessive. This would be a basis for the compromising of protested tax bills.

Mayor Opposes Compromise.

Mayor Cermak also made an attack yesterday on the proposals that Chicago local governments compromise with taxpayers who have avoided payment of their bills to date through court procedure.

"It is a grossly unfair proposition," said the mayor, "and would be a flagrant injustice to the small property owners who have already paid their share of the cost of maintaining the government during those years. I am strongly opposed to any compromise.

"Any rebate or compromise would fall upon the small property owners. The money for which the levies now in dispute in court were laid has already been spent. Any rebate to these tax strikers would create a deficit for the years in question. This would have to be met by heaping more taxes upon honest taxpayers in years to come.

"These tax strikes have already cost the city millions of dollars in interest which it has had to pay on the money borrowed to finance its operations while the taxes were being collected. The delinquents who can afford to pay, and I make a distinction between these and those who are really impoverished, are responsible for the city being burdened with those interest payments."

The Illinois Supreme court yesterday stayed for 60 days its mandate in the Cisar case, which was a test case for most of the taxpayers appearing yesterday before Judge Jarecki, so that Attorneys Keehn and Schaeffer may seek an appeal to the United States Supreme court. The Illinois court ruled against the plaintiffs and sustained the 1928 and 1929 assessment rolls in Cook county.

GARNER STARTS CAMPAIGN WITH HOOVER ATTACK

Candidate Denies Charge He Is Radical.

New York, Oct. 14.—[Special.]—John N. Garner, Democratic nominee for Vice President, opened his campaign tonight with a radio address in which he denied that he is a "dangerous radical" and took the Hoover administration to task on the national budget deficit, finance, and depression relief measures.

Mr. Garner devoted long sections of his speech to quotations from President Hoover's views on the subjects he discussed as carried in the President's recent Des Moines address and messages to congress. He invited his audience to weigh the efforts of the last Democratic congress to solve the nation's outstanding problems with the administration's program, but wanted it understood that "the important thing is not whether Herbert Hoover or John Garner is the greater authority on finance and legislation." He wanted the "printed facts," he said, to speak for themselves.

Silent on Own Program.

The "facts," as Mr. Garner recited them, made no mention of his own memorable two billion "pork barrel" scheme framed as a postoffice building program to furnish work for the nation's unemployed and was almost as shy on the Garner finance program.

He charged the President with misleading statements regarding the country's finances and insisted that in spite of all the adminstration's sins "there is nothing the matter with the finances and credit of the United States except gross mismanagement."

"We have at this moment every element to promote prosperity except one," he said. "That one is confidence in our credit structure."

Need Only Safe Ratio.

Apropos of "sound money," however, the speaker assured his audience that "a gold country doesn't have to keep 100 cents in gold in the till for every paper dollar any more than a bank has to keep all deposits in cash. You only have to keep a safe ratio. What ratio is safe depends on confidence."

As to the depression, Mr. Garner denied that it had "come from abroad," and instead that it had been caused by the folly of the administration and its policy on tariff, foreign loans, and the budget.

"It came from our own folly and illusion," he said, "not the least of which was that prosperity was so great that poverty would soon be abolished."

"Plain Business Man."

Early in the course of his remarks the nominee undertook to disabuse the minds of his hearers of any suspicion they might entertain that he is a "dangerous radical" instead of just the "plain business man" he says he actually is.

"I know," he said, "I have been represented in certain partisan argument as a dangerous radical, either without the disposition to understand great public questions or with a Satanic desire to turn things topsy turvy with some wild idea of destruction. Actually I am a plain business man who has happened to have had a long legislative experience as the representative of a conservative community.

"This experience has endowed me with a fair realization, I hope, of the problems of government. As a member of the ways and means committee every fiscal problem, for example, has been perforce a matter of study, for I assure you that we in congress are as cognizant of our responsibilities and as much alive to the requirements of our trust as any other government official, from President down."

Would Stick to Record.

Furthermore, Mr. Garner said he was actuated by a desire to "bring the political debate back to the high level which its extreme gravity requires," sticking to the "printed record" and letting his audience "use their own cuss words if they are so disposed."

With these preliminaries, the nominee plunged forthwith into an indictment of the administration. His first concern was with the depression.

"Did the depression come from abroad?" he demanded as a starter. "Our export business is less than 8 per cent of our total business and the par value of foreign loans about 8 per cent of our wealth. Say we have lost half of all this foreign stake, or 4 per cent of wealth and business. Does that account for the 40 per cent to 50 per cent loss of both? Two million people were employed in production for export—half of them are out of work. Does that explain our ten to twelve million unemployed? We consume 50 per cent of the world's production of raw material.

"The 1929 crash hit here first. It was like an avalanche. By that sudden disruption of so much of human commerce, we rocked the world from pole to pole. The depression did not come from Europe. It came from our own folly and illusion, not the least of which was that prosperity was so great that poverty would soon be abolished.

Refers to 1928 Program.

"But I am not content to rest on general charges. I want to trace cause to effect in the cold print of the record. Mr. Hoover says he has an exclusive personal program now to temper disaster. He had one in 1928 to insure prosperity. Let's look at that. Let us begin with agriculture."

Mr. Garner here quoted from President Hoover's discussion of various economic problems under the headings of agriculture, inland waterways, the federal farm board, etc.

"There we have his specific program in his own words," said Mr. Garner. "How did it work? The Smoot-Hawley tariff on the one hand gave higher rates and on the other destroyed export farm markets. The St. Lawrence waterway is not begun; the Mississippi project is years from fulfillment. The farm board is an acknowledged failure. Let the farmer draw his own conclusions about the new-twelve point program."

Attacks Industrial Record.

Other lengthy quotations from presidential comment followed. Then said Mr. Garner:

"There is his industrial program in his own words. It violated Mr. Hoover's advice to the lawyers last Wednesday when he spoke of 'seductive and unworkable theories that promise a millennium.' Every element of this plan was error and every error brought disaster.

"Financing loans to crippled countries was folly. Increasing tariffs destroyed foreign trade and made debt payment impossible. Errors in the deliberate balance of taxes and spending did cause fabulous losses and upset the stability of business.

"On this specific record covering the whole field of our economics, my sole comment is two questions: How about the foreign alibi? How about the myth of business reliance on Republican leadership?

New Edition of "Myth."

"In 1932 we have a new edition of the 1928 myth—something like this: Last winter a wave of fiscal destruction rolled in from Europe on the embattled administration until, at its crisis, our gold standard had two weeks to live. Our form of government was in the balance. In spite of flank attacks by the Democratic congress, the administration saved the day and came out with an exclusive program which has defeated the depression. Thank God for this Republican administration.

"I hasten to disclaim any sarcasm. What I have just said was a fair paraphrase of the Des Moines speech. If it sounds sarcastic it is only because of the absurdity of the original. Let's get down to the record. Nobody doubts that there was a financial panic which threatened our banking and credit system. But the vital question for voters is: 'What caused it?' Mr. Hoover says (I quote):

Quotes Hoover Message.

"'Critical assaults and dangers swept upon us from foreign countries.' But he also said in his annual message:

"'The fundamental difficulties which have brought about financial strain in foreign countries do not exist in the United States.'

"In other words Mr. Hoover presents that Europe was broke and America sound, so Europeans rushed to get their money out of here and take it back to the very seat of trouble. I also leave that alibi to the judgment of American common sense.

"We couldn't listen to that one even if there had been no cause for panic here. But there was cause here big enough to panic any country. Back in 1928 Mr. Hoover said (I quote again):

"'The assessment of taxes and expenditures of public monies have come to bear a vital part in business stability. We have adopted a measure of federal control of credit. Errors in that delicate adjustment can cause us fabulous losses.'

"Mr. Hoover's errors in that 'delicate adjustment' are also called deficits."

Gradually Mr. Garner got down to the President's remarks in his Des Moines speech bearing on the administration's fight to save the gold standard. The speaker professed to be dumfounded by Mr. Hoover's statement that the country was within two weeks of what he (Garner) referred to as "world collapse."

Talks on Gold Standard.

"I do not intend to go into the delicate technique of the gold standard and its abstruse connotations," Mr. Garner continued. "It would be different if I were addressing an audience of expert accountants and financial adepts. I will merely suggest that a gold country doesn't have to keep 100 cents in gold in the till for every paper dollar any more than a bank has to keep all deposits in cash. You only have to keep a safe ratio. What ratio is safe depends on confidence.

"Back in last February, which was the time referred to by the President, our paper money had the heaviest gold backing, with two exceptions, of any paper money in the world.

"I can tell you that to say that we were within two weeks of the edge of the gold standard because of any lack of gold is a libel on the credit of the United States.

Mr. Garner went into the fight to balance the budget during the last congress in great detail.

Discusses Budget Battle.

"I knew that the national security depended on a balanced budget," he said. "The important thing was the result, not the method. The administration which now says that world credit and American revolution depended on the result then stood aside and chuckled and jeered."

Mr. Garner contended that "the record bears out my judgment in that great crisis," and quoted from the Congressional Record to show that he was willing to levy a sales tax "or any other kind of tax" in order to balance the national budget and "restore the confidence of the world."

He submitted that the Democratic congress is shown by the record to have been "determined and willing to go the limit for a balanced budget," but insisted that its purpose was "frustrated" by the administration so that "the whole job must be done over."

ILLINOIS CLAIMED FOR ROOSEVELT BY 'EVERY KNOWN TEST'

Local Democratic leaders returned yesterday from the state-wide conference of party managers at Springfield predicting that Judge Henry Horner, Democratic nominee for governor, will win by a large vote.

"In the last month the Democratic leaders in all parts of the state have applied every known test to find out the sentiment of the voters," read a statement issued by George T. Scully, assistant director of the state campaign. "The tests indicate an overwhelming Democratic victory, both for the national and state tickets.

"The extent of the swing to the Democratic ticket in districts normally Republican is amazing. In the northern counties, where in previous years Democratic candidates have received few votes, both Gov. Roosevelt and Judge Horner are due to receive at least 60 per cent of the ballots. In central Illinois the percentage is even greater."

Gov. Ritchie Ill, but Will Start to Chicago Tomorrow

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 14.—(AP)—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland was confined to his bed today by a severe cold. Despite his illness Gov. Ritchie completed arrangements for his speaking tour next week of the great lake states in behalf of the Democratic national candidates. He will leave Sunday afternoon from Baltimore for Chicago.

HOOVER TO MAKE SECOND MIDWEST SPEECH TONIGHT

Expected to Quiz Roosevelt on Bonus Stand.

President Hoover's speech will be broadcast by W-G-N at 7:30 o'clock tonight, Chicago time.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—President Hoover will leave for Cleveland, O., early tomorrow to launch a new offensive against the heads of the Democratic presidential ticket and to make his second major bid for the electoral votes of the highly important doubtful states of the middle and central west.

Leaving Washington at 7 o'clock the President will deliver a series of short platform addresses during a day of personal campaigning along the Baltimore and Ohio right of way between Washington and his Ohio destination. The principal speech will be delivered in Cleveland auditorium at 8:30 Cleveland time, which is 7:30 p. m. Chicago time.

Officials close to the White House tonight said the President in his second invasion of the west in less than two weeks would carry the fight directly to the heads of the Democratic ticket in a speech devoted largely to economic issues, unemployment, labor and the administration program for meeting the depression. It was hinted that President Hoover might call upon Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, his rival for the presidency, to state his policy on immediate payment of the bonus.

Regarded as Critical.

Republican leaders in close touch with the White House expressed the opinion tonight that the Cleveland speech would be one of the most critical of the campaign. They asserted that the speech delivered at Des Moines had turned the tide away from Roosevelt and started a strong trend toward the Republicans. The President's task tomorrow, they said, will be to deliver an address which will not only hold the gains already made but give the campaign added impetus as well.

Reports which have reached the White House during the last week have been the most optimistic of the campaign up to date. Republican leaders telegraphing and telephoning in their views have stated that the Des Moines speech coupled with the reception given the President on the way to and from Iowa served to put new pep into the campaign.

Will Make Short Stops.

The first stop to be made by the President tomorrow will be at Martinsburg, W. Va., at 8:47. The next stop will be Cumberland, Md., where the presidential train will stay ten minutes to allow Mr. Hoover to give a short talk and greet the crowd. Other stops during the day include Meyersdale, Connellsville, McKeesport, Braddock, Zelienople, Newcastle, all of Pennsylvania, and Youngstown and Akron, O. Ten minute stops will be made at Youngstown and Akron.

Senator David A. Reed [Rep., Pa.] was one of the few callers at the White House today. He said that Pennsylvania was certain to go to the Hoover-Curtis ticket.

White House callers noted that the President's right hand was bandaged, a reminder of the rigors of last night's White House reception where Mr. Hoover shook hands with more than 3,000 guests before his physician called a halt. The President's hand was cut by a ring worn by one of the guests, it was said.

CANDIDATE GARNER PRAISES LONGWORTH IN OPENING SPEECH

New York, Oct. 14.—(AP)—The first thing Speaker John N. Garner did tonight when he stepped up to a microphone to make a campaign speech was to pay a tribute to the late Nicholas Longworth, his friend and predecessor in office.

"Now I have been in congress for 30 years during Republican and Democratic administrations," said the Democratic nominee for Vice President. "During that time I have learned that no man and no party have a monopoly of good intentions or of intelligence.

"It was the proudest moment of my life when I became speaker of the house. This was particularly so because I succeeded a great man and a great speaker, my closest, dearest friend, Nick Longworth, a square shooter if there ever was one and a Republican as devoted to the principles of his party as I hope I am to mine. Nick Longworth was a sportsman and played the game according to the rules."

CANDIDATES ASK FOR WRIT IN OAK PARK ELECTION

A petition for a writ of mandamus to compel the trustees of the village of Oak Park to order the printing of ballots for the election of a judge and clerk of a Municipal court for the suburb was filed in the Superior court yesterday. The petition asserts that the new court was authorized in the primary election of April 12 by a referendum vote of 8,791 to 6,787.

The petition was filed by Attorney John F. Tyrrell in behalf of Henry F. Lawrence, candidate for clerk, and Thomas W. Barrett Jr., candidate for judge on the Welfare party ticket. Fred W. Rice, candidate for clerk, and J. Edward Jones, candidate for judge on the Citizens' Independent party ticket, joined in the petition.

Lottie Pickford Seeks Divorce from Undertaker

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—Lottie Pickford, sister of Mary Pickford, today filed divorce proceedings against Russell O. Gilliard, Muskegon, Mich., undertaker. She accuses Gilliard of nonsupport and calling her mean names. Miss Pickford was divorced twice before, once from Albert George Rupp and once from Allen Forrest, actor. She wed Gilliard in 1929.

FORD TO MAKE RADIO PLEA WEDNESDAY FOR HOOVER'S ELECTION

New York, Oct. 14.—(AP)—The Republican national committee announced today that Henry Ford will make a radio appeal next Wednesday night for the reelection of Herbert Hoover.

This will be Mr. Ford's first political address, the national committee said.

The address will be carried over a coast to coast hookup and will be broadcast from Dearborn, Mich., at 8:30 p. m.

HIRAM JOHNSON ANNOUNCES HE'S AGAINST HOOVER

Senator Avers He Cannot Support President.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—United States Senator Hiram W. Johnson, California Radical Republican, today issued a statement in which he said: "I cannot and will not support Mr. Hoover for reelection." His statement was made in response to a request by representatives of southern California newspapers that he declare himself publicly for the national and state Republican tickets.

"I am a Progressive Republican; Mr. Hoover is not," Senator Johnson said. "He has justly earned the title of ultra-conservative. The difference between the two may be described in a generalization and could be particularized in a hundred acts of the existing national administration."

Won Roosevelt's Praise.

"The Republican party is not at stake in this campaign," said Mr. Johnson, whose criticism of President Hoover recently won praise from Gov. Roosevelt when the Democratic presidential nominee was campaigning in California. "It is only the ambition of one man, who but a little more than a decade ago did not know which was his party, and who before that had no American party at all.

"In the present cataclysm, with eleven million unemployed, and suffering and want on every hand, the man who puts his party fealty and his hope of political preferment above the welfare of our people does the worst possible disservice to his country. I recognize that each individual, according as he sees the light, must make his choice. I make mine. I cannot and will not support Mr. Hoover."

Says He's Progressive.

In the course of his statement Senator Johnson said:

"I have publicly expressed my views upon national policies and concerning the present administration upon the floor of the senate and otherwise. I had assumed these were known, particularly to Californians, and that there was no necessity again to express them in this campaign.

"For many years in the politics of this nation two distinct political philosophies have constantly clashed, and in the present economic crisis these two conflicting philosophies stand out the one against the other in bold relief. On the one hand is the progressive, on the other the ultraconservative.

Assails "Standpatter."

"The progressive believe this government belongs to all its people, not to a favored or privileged few, and that it should be administered equally and impartially for all, high and low, rich and poor alike. The standpatter, paying lip service to common humanity, makes a mock of his words by his court of special classes, and his subserviency to special interests, and his indifference, as in the instances of the power trust and the sale of foreign securities to trusting American investors by international bankers, to the ruthless exploitation of our people.

"The progressive thinks in terms of human beings; the standpatter has little thought or concern for them. When Mr. Hoover became President, his philosophy of government became apparent. Before that we knew little or nothing of his policies or politics. My views are those of a long lifetime. His have been acquired in the very brief period he has resided among us.

For "Loyalty to People."

"In your telegram, apparently, you stress party regularity. In this crisis, I stress loyalty to the American people. You say you are the representative of seventy southern California newspapers. If you were the representative of seven thousand newspapers, or just one ordinary American citizen, my answer would be the same.

"I was elected by men and women of all shades of political opinion, Democrats, progressive and conservative Republicans—by the people of the state of California. My first allegiance is to all the people of this state. I would not taint my record nor stultify myself now by abandoning the principles for which I have battled unceasingly during my career—the principles for which the sovereign people of California elected me in 1928."

ROOSEVELT LEADS IN 31 OUT OF 38 STATES IN MAGAZINE POLL

New York, Oct. 14.—[Special.]—With 2,000,000 ballots in, the Literary Digest today announces that in its presidential poll Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt is leading in 31 out of the 38 states tabulated.

President Hoover leads only in New England and New Jersey, a total of seven states, while in the states missing four are in the solid south, certain to go Democratic—Texas, Florida, North Carolina, and Virginia—four are border states—Missouri, Tennessee, Oklahoma, and Maryland—and the remaining two states omitted are Minnesota and Washington.

The latest figures show the New York governor carrying New York state, with its 47 electoral votes, the count being Hoover, 145,554; Roosevelt, 156,447. Pennsylvania, even to the surprise of the Democrats, continues to be almost overwhelmingly for Roosevelt, 110,549 to 80,094.

Massachusetts, however, holds fast, despite the fact that four years ago the state was carried by Alfred E. Smith and that it is represented by a Democratic governor and two Democratic senators. The figures are Hoover, 49,543; Roosevelt, 38,250.

ROOSEVELT HAS NEW POLICY ON VETERAN RELIEF

Expected to State Views in Near Future.

granting of loans by the federal government to needy veterans upon the security of their adjusted compensation certificates, but only in the cases of such veterans as can demonstrate their imperative need of aid.

The governor is said to view such an obligation of the government as a proper one to assume, and he feels, it is said, that veterans who cannot show poverty ought to be willing to indorse any plan granting aid to their comrades in distress.

Date Is Uncertain.

As to when the governor will make his announcement has been shrouded in deep secrecy, with Mr. Roosevelt actually whetting interest in his forthcoming announcement by holding out occasional crumbs of information during his conferences with newspaper correspondents.

Today, for example, the governor said before leaving Albany for his home at Hyde Park on the Hudson that he might issue a statement of importance some time during the weekend. He refused to disclose the nature of the statement.

"Is it on the bonus?" he was asked.

"O, why don't you let up on me with that question?" he cried out goodnaturedly. And then he threw out the tantalizing suggestion: "Everybody knows I'm going to make my stand on the bonus known. But when I shall is my business."

Advisers to Visit Him.

The governor will spend the weekend at Hyde Park and will be joined there by Dr. Raymond P. Moley, professor of economics at Columbia university. He has aided the governor in the preparation of most of his campaign addresses. Another guest will be Justice Samuel Rosenman of the New York Supreme court, his former personal counsel and close political advisor.

Today the governor conferred with Senator Tom Connally and Representative Marvin Jones, both of Texas. Mr. Jones is chairman of the house agricultural committee.

Judge Sets Date for $50,000 Slander Trial

Judge Paul McWilliams, in the Superior court, yesterday ordered Mrs. Blanche Mae McKeever, wealthy widow of 1500 Lake Shore drive, to file a plea and be ready within ten days for trial of the $50,000 slander suit brought against her by Mrs. Mae G. Wilford, 1429 North Clark street. Mrs. Wilford, a dressmaker, charged that Mrs. McKeever told her friends that Mrs. Wilford was a detective and that she posed as a dressmaker to enter wealthy homes and obtain information for the agency that employed her.

GARNER TARGET FOR NEW ATTACK BY G.O.P. LEADERS

Roosevelt Is Accused of Following Hoover.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Speaker John N. [Cactus Jack] Garner, running mate of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, was made a target yesterday for a bombardment from Republican national headquarters.

G. O. P. managers charged that Roosevelt and his team mate, Garner, are now traveling in opposite directions. Divergent views, they declared, have been taken by the Democratic candidates for President and for Vice President on the "pork barrel" program which gained the sobriquet for Garner of "Postoffice Jack," and they held the issue of pork has blown the hyphen out of Roosevelt-Garner.

Follows Hoover's Lead.

Will R. Wood of Indiana, chairman of the Republican national congressional committee, put forth a declaration that Roosevelt in his speech Thursday night followed the leadership of President Hoover, who vetoed the Garner "pork barrel" program, saying it would make Uncle Sam the "most gigantic pawnbroker of history."

"In expressing the view that the government should confine its expenditures for public works to those which are self-sustaining, Gov. Roosevelt seems to have absorbed entirely his ideas from the President's message vetoing the Garner pork barrel. His attitude is directly at variance with the 'put a postoffice on every corner' ideas of the speaker.

"The relief act, which was passed in conformity with the principle insisted upon by the President, following his veto of the Garner bill, provided for loans for five different classes of self-liquidating projects. This provision forms a new section [20] of the Reconstruction corporation act.

Proposed Wholesale Loans.

"The Garner proposal for this new section was for wholesale loans to every Tom, Dick, and Harry, reading: 'To make loans, upon such terms and conditions not inconsistent with this act as it may determine, to any person.'

"This is the provision which, if Speaker Garner and his fellow Democrats in congress had had their way, would have put the government into a gigantic pawn brokerage business."

"Gov. Roosevelt," he said, "has again offered suggestions for spending money without explaining just how he means to reduce government expenditures by 25 per cent, as pledged by the Democratic platform.

"In his speech he dismisses the subject airily with the remark 'I believe there are many ways in which such reductions of expenditures can take place,' and 'we must economize in other ways.' Throughout the campaign he has contented himself with meaningless statements of this kind and up to this date has failed to offer a single specific suggestion for a reduction in expenditures."

Britten Assails Garner.

"Postoffice Jack," likewise drew a thrust in a statement put out by national headquarters under the name of Congressman Fred A. Britten. It said:

"'Postoffice Jack' Garner's silence during the present campaign, which has led to reports that he has been 'muzzled' by the Roosevelt campaign managers, does not make the first time he has sought refuge in quiet. Garner apparently realizes that he might say something which he would regret. That he has had this experience in the past is evident from the fact that on numerous occasions he has suppressed speeches which he had made on the floor of the house."

More Calls for Coolidge.

Following the drive on Illinois which opened with the Coliseum speech of Ogden L. Mills, secretary of the treasury, Republican managers yesterday put in more calls for Calvin Coolidge to make a speech in Chicago. Nearly all the Republican county chairmen in Illinois were reported to have written in calling for a Coolidge address.

Headquarters reported that the former President has not yet decided. Pressure is to be renewed to get him into Illinois during the final fortnight.

Announcement that Gov. Theodore Roosevelt of the Philippine islands will make a half hour speech for the Hoover-Curtis ticket Oct. 25 was made last night by Republican national headquarters. His talk will be delivered in Manila, carried by short wave radio to San Francisco, and then broadcast over a national hookup from 5 to 5:30 p. m., Chicago time.

WILSON AVENUE PEDESTRIAN, 70, KILLED BY AUTO

Charles H. Nicholson, 70 years old, 845 Montrose avenue, a retired salesman, was fatally injured yesterday afternoon by an automobile at Broadway and Wilson avenue. He was taken by the Town Hall police to the Lakeview hospital where he died last night. Joseph Denison, 27 years old, 4232 Kenmore avenue, the driver, was held.

Gustav Lathouwels, 20 years old, 2420 North Campbell avenue, was killed last night when the bicycle he was riding was struck at Franklin and Sacramento boulevards by an automobile driven by Rex Aikman, 200 Lee street, Evanston. Aikman was held.

Mrs. Carrie Potter Heath, 73 years old, 934 North Seventh avenue, La Grange Park, died late yesterday of internal injuries and shock she suffered Oct. 8 in an automobile accident at West Grand and North Ashland avenues.

John Laskowski, 42 years old, 2620 West 24th street, was killed by an automobile yesterday in the west drive of Douglas park, just south of Roosevelt road.

These four deaths and two others raised the Cook county motor toll for 1932 to 892. The other victims:

Walter Selig, 30 years old, 1826 Kedvale avenue. Died in the Oak Park hospital of injuries suffered Thursday night in a collision in River Forest. Attorney Howard A. Brundage, 615 Monroe street, was the driver of the other car.

Chester Victor, 8 years old, 6108 Diversey avenue. Died in the county hospital. He was struck by an automobile in front of his home on Tuesday night.

Albert Chambers, 4452 Sheridan road, an army private stationed with the 94th pursuit group at Selfridge field, Mich., was killed and another man seriously injured yesterday morning in an automobile collision at Mount Clemens.

U. S. PAYS HIM $6,500 YEARLY; DUTIES MYSTERY

Washington, D. C., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—The navy department from admirals to clerks was wondering today just what are the duties of a "civil administrative assistant" to Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ernest Lee Jahncke, as word came of the appointment last July of one Sam Jones to this new job at a salary of $6,500 a year. His chief draws $9,000 a year.

The appointment, which was approved by President Hoover, came on the heels of the announcement that the job of assistant secretary of the navy [formerly held by David S. Ingalls] had been permanently made vacant for economy's sake.

The job is new to Washington. But Mr. Jones is not.

HOOVER BLOCKS WILBUR DEBATE WITH GOV. RITCHIE

Further weight was added yesterday to statements that it was President Hoover who prevented a member of his cabinet, Ray Lyman Wilbur, from meeting Gov. Albert C. Ritchie in debate in Chicago next Monday night.

RAY LYMAN WILBUR.

While declining to enter into a discussion of the incident, Melvin A. Traylor, a participant in the arrangements for the debate, confirmed a statement that he had received authoritative word that the President had ruled that some substitute must be found to take the place of the secretary of the interior.

Wilbur to Go to Madison.

It also was learned that a list of speakers' itineraries issued by the Republican national headquarters last Wednesday indicated that Secretary Wilbur would be in Chicago on Monday. But the last word from the speakers' bureau was that about two weeks ago the secretary was billed to speak in Madison, Wis., on Monday.

The debate by national speakers of the two major parties was projected by Northwestern university as a feature of the dedication of the Thorne memorial on McKinlock campus, the argument to be broadcast over a radio chain. It was announced that Secretary Wilbur would face Gov. Ritchie, but a second announcement a few days later was that the Republican speaker would be Henry J. Allen, former governor of Kansas, head of the publicity bureau at national headquarters in the Palmer house.

Ritchie Makes Statement.

There was no public explanation for the substitution, but as tongues began to wag Gov. Ritchie was interviewed at Baltimore.

"While in New York last Monday," said the governor, "I received a long distance telephone call from Mr. Traylor, who was the man who invited me to take part in the debate. He told me he had been informed that President Hoover would not permit Secretary Wilbur to speak unless he was assured I would not engage in any criticism of him. It struck me that President Hoover's record as President is an important question in the campaign and one that could not be ignored in a debate.

"I told Mr. Traylor I could not comply with the request."

It is reported that President Hoover felt that it was unfitting that a member of his cabinet should be called upon to defend him in debate.

She departed in accordance with an agreement she made with the labor department. Commissioner Harry E. Hull at Washington said she was not deported.

Capt. William N. Lancaster, whose love affair with the aviatrix was described at his recent trial and acquittal in Miami for the slaying of Hayden Clarke, was among a small group of friends who saw her off.

Several hours later Capt. Lancaster sailed aboard the liner Scythia. He, too, was accompanied by an immigration officer who saw him to his cabin and waited on the pier until the ship was under way.

Mrs. Keith-Miller appeared near tears as she boarded the vessel. She had nothing to say except that she was going to London to be with her people.

Clarke, a 31 year old writer, was found shot to death last April in the house at Miami he occupied with Mrs. Keith-Miller and Capt. Lancaster. The case at first was listed as a suicide, but authorities later said they found evidence which they held pointed to murder, including a suicide note they charged Lancaster had forged.

FIND THOUSANDS OF ALIENS FED BY RELIEF FUND

Government Is Ready to Deport Them.

A veteran inspector of the United States immigration service estimated yesterday that 20 per cent of the 105,000 families on the relief rolls of the Cook county bureau of public welfare are aliens or have alien members. The inspector made this estimate after his chief, C. A. Palmer, district director of immigration, appealed to the welfare bureau for the names and addresses of aliens receiving public charity.

Mr. Palmer pointed out that the government has the power to deport many of these aliens and thereby, in some measure, relieve the taxpayers of the burden caused by the expenditure of $1,500,000 a week for relief in Cook county.

Flock to Big Cities.

Speaking from his experience as an immigration official, Mr. Palmer told the advisory committee of the bureau that aliens flock to industrial centers during times of distress. He pointed out that the government provides free transportation to the homelands of indigent aliens who have been in this country not more than three years and who will return voluntarily. He explained, also, that all aliens who have entered the country illegally since July 1, 1924, can be deported.

Mr. Palmer suggested that, if he had access to the bureau's records showing the persons who are getting relief from the county, the records might be used by the government in ordering deportations.

Statute Quoted as Bar.

In answer to the request for access to the records the advisory committee quoted from the statute creating the bureau of public welfare in 1926 as follows:

"The records shall be opened to the public only upon the written order of the president of the county board or upon the order of any court of record in each particular case, after written application." This law, said the members of the committee, made it impossible to turn over the general records and it would be impracticable to proceed with particular cases.

Mr. Palmer disagreed with the view that supplying the government immigration service with the records would constitute opening them to the public, within the meaning of the statute, but the committee overruled him.

In an interview Mr. Palmer said that although the new regulation providing for the free transportation of indigent aliens back home has not been widely explained among aliens, the government is now taking from 50 to 60 voluntary deportees from Chicago each month, and that about 1,000 have left in this manner in the last 18 months. About 1,000 aliens are deported from Chicago each year for illegal entry or crimes committed after arrival.

Many Could Be Deported.

"We believe that a great many of the aliens receiving relief could be deported," said Mr. Palmer. "Some would go voluntarily if they knew of the opportunity and others could be deported for illegal entry. We believe that aliens who entered this country illegally have no right to be here, much less to be supported at public expense."

The estimate that 20 per cent of the families receiving relief are aliens is denied by employés of the county welfare bureau, but they lack records to support their denial. The question of citizenship and length of residence—is recorded by "case workers" who investigate applications for relief, but these records are not compiled.

A study of 3,150 men of 60 years of age or over, made in the shelters for homeless men by Melvin Philbrick of the Council of Social Agencies disclosed that only 1,773 were born in the United States, or 57.9 per cent of the total. Only 535 of these were natives of Illinois.

Of the foreign born, 375, or 11.9 per cent, by their own admission, were not naturalized citizens. Of these, 17 said they had been in Chicago less than one year, 32 had been here from 1 to 5 years and 70 from 6 to 10 years. All of the first group of 17 and most of the second group of 32 could be deported voluntarily under the indigent clause, it was said, and some of the 70 in the third group might be deported for illegal entry.

Make False Claims.

According to the immigration inspectors, their experience in handling aliens has shown that most foreign born persons claim citizenship whether they have their first papers or none at all, and an investigation might disclose a greater percentage of unnaturalized aliens.

Another survey made in the shelters for homeless men, by Robert W. Beasley, director of the shelters, showed that 61 per cent of the inmates are native born and 39 per cent are foreign born. With a total of 16,000 homeless men being cared for in the shelters, this percentage, which Mr. Beasley says will hold true, although he examined only 6,009 men, means that 6,240 foreigners are depending upon the public for food and shelter.

This foreign born percentage of 39 is out of proportion with the foreign born population of Chicago, which is only 26 per cent, according to the 1930 census.

Statements Are Unreliable.

Mr. Beasley said that no effort was made to determine the percentage of unnaturalized aliens in the shelters, admitting frankly that the statements of the men regarding citizenship are unreliable. He estimated, however, that about one-third of the foreign born applicants for relief admit they are noncitizens. If this estimate is correct, 2,080 aliens are being cared for in the shelters alone. That would be 13 per cent of the total.

"The aliens think they will receive better treatment if they are thought to be citizens," said Mr. Beasley. "But we cannot make citizenship a requirement for admission. Many aliens have lived and worked in Chicago for years and are as much entitled to relief as anybody else."

Mrs. George A. McKinlock headed a group of society women meeting yesterday at the Chicago Red Cross headquarters to discuss plans for a model workroom in the loop for the production of garments for the poor.

The garments are to be made of cloth manufactured from 500,000 bales of cotton which congress authorized the Cotton Stabilization corporation to turn over to the Red Cross for relief purposes. The workroom will be under the supervision of an executive committee headed by Mrs. McKinlock.

Samples of the garments to be turned out in the workshop, both for children and adults, were modeled at the committee meeting yesterday.

Identify Ex-Policeman as Michigan Bank Robber

Michael De Laurentis, 36 years old, 2456 New England avenue, was identified at the detective bureau last night as one of the bandits who held up the First State bank of Holland, Mich., on Sept. 29 and obtained $73,000. Two deputy sheriffs identified De Laurentis, who was arrested when he accompanied a friend to court Thursday. De Laurentis is a former Chicago policeman who was discharged on charges of trying to shake down a beer flat owner.

FARMERS' SALES OF CUT RATE MILK STILL GAINING

Dealers Open Drive on Hoodlums.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Reports from outlying cities in the Chicago area yesterday indicated a continued increase in sales of milk by farmers to customers at less than the regular price of 11 cents a quart. Meanwhile officials of the organized dairy industry were investigating possible means of reducing milk distribution costs.

In such cities as those in the northern Indiana industrial district, in Joliet, Aurora, and Waukegan in Illinois, and at some of the nearby points in Wisconsin milk is being retailed at 9 and 10 cents per quart. Roadside stands were making increased sales at prices around 5 cents a quart.

Farmers' Group Silent.

Officers of the Pure Milk association, representing 19,000 dairy farmers supplying the metropolitan area, as well as spokesmen for Chicago dairy companies, declined to discuss the progress of their joint efforts to arrive at a suitable means of checking the flood of low priced milk being offered by farmers.

The milk association, however, in a summary of the situation given to its members this week, declared that "roadside selling of dipped milk by farmers has practically ruined the milk business in the Calumet section and is now starting in other territories."

Health commissioners in some of the western suburbs yesterday reported they had ordered police to arrest all milk peddlers found making deliveries without a license. Several farmers are established on routes in Glen Ellyn, Flossmoor, Homewood, and other suburbs, selling pasteurized milk of high butterfat content at 9 and 10 cents a quart.

Launch Drive on Hoodlums.

Announcement was made yesterday by the Milk Council, Inc., composed of larger milk dealers in the Chicago area, that a drive had been launched against the "petty hoodlums who have been preying upon milk wagon drivers." A reward of $100 has been offered for information leading to arrest and conviction of any such vandals. The council reported an average of five milk driver holdups a week recently.

B. & O. RAILROAD IS GRANTED NEW R. F. C. LOAN OF 3 MILLION

Washington, D. C., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—The interstate commerce commission today approved an application of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad for a loan of $3,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance corporation for repair of equipment. Under the relief bill authorizing such advances by the by the corporation, approved of the interstate commerce commission is required before the loan can be made.

The $3,000,000 advance will be the largest amount yet granted a railroad by the corporation for repairs or maintenance of equipment. Such advances are made with the specific purpose of providing or maintaining employment on the roads this winter.

According to the commission, 1,500 men who otherwise would be jobless this winter, will be given employment for six months in the B. & O. shops, with that many more furnished work in supplying materials.

Meanwhile, today, the Reconstruction Finance corporation granted relief loans of $237,097 to the state of Texas for emergency relief in nine counties, and $81,166 to Missouri for relief in St. Louis county, the city of St. Joseph and the towns of Nevada and Henrietta.

Posses with Bloodhounds Hunt Slayer of Farmer

Edward L. Ryerson Jr., chairman of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, said yesterday that the bill passed by the legislature on Thursday allowing counties to divert their one cent share of the three cent state gas tax for relief purposes would be "helpful" downstate but of little assistance to Cook county.

"I am pleased, however, that the legislature saw fit to pass it," he said. "I think it is an important part of the legislative program to provide additional state funds for unemployment relief. But it does not complete that program by any means."

The optional county sales tax which was a part of the legislative relief program was defeated by the assembly and action on the Meents bill which would permit counties to issue relief bonds without referendum was postponed.

Help to Downstate.

"The gas tax measure will be of great help to downstate counties as it will allow them to meet their own relief problems," Mr. Ryerson continued. "But it will help but little in Cook county as the funds it will provide are greatly inadequate to meet the needs here."

Mr. Ryerson announced that a delegation probably will be named within the next week to go to Washington to appeal to the Reconstruction Finance corporation for additional funds to pay for relief work until Nov. 15. The relief commission's funds will be exhausted by Nov. 1, he said.

Mr. Ryerson was asked how he thought the legislature's action in passing only one relief would impress the R. F. C. officers who, at the time of the last loan, told the Illinois delegation that the assembly must first exhaust all the state's money raising facilities.

"I can't answer that," he replied. "It is regrettable that the entire legislative program for relief was not passed."

Work for Relief Bonds.

Earl C. Smith, chairman of the state committee working for the passage of the $20,000,000 relief bond issue at the Nov. 8 election, yesterday announced the appointment of a number of downstate leaders as vice chairmen of the committee. They include Charles W. Boyden, Sheffield; Ralph V. Field, Galesburg; H. L. Williamson, R. Allan Stephens and John H. Walker, Springfield; E. C. Heidrich, Peoria; A. D. McLarty, Urbana; J. E. Mitchell, Carbondale; O. B. Pratt, Elgin; Gerry D. Scott, Wyoming; June C. Smith Centralia; R. G. Soderstrom, Streator, and Walter Williams, Benton.

Pass Traffic Light; Taken with Whisky in Truck

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 14.—(AP)—Two eastern truck drivers and their 325 case cargo of what police said was whisky worth $16,000 were in custody today because of failure to observe a traffic light in the suburb of Dearborn. Those arrested gave the names of Fred Woeltjen, 30, of Laurelton, N. Y., and Bernard Fried, 26, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Special Taxes to Cost City's Motorists 28 Millions in '32

BY HAL FOUST.

Special taxes paid by Chicago motorists in 1932 will approximate $28,466,000. Under relief legislation awaiting the governor's signature, $2,153,000 probably will be used for charity. The state highway department, retaining its revenue from 2 cents of the gasoline tax and from the license fees, will receive $16,331,000 of Chicago's payment.

The Cook county highway department, with six months' collection of its 1 cent of the gas tax destined for charity, will get $1,542,000. Chicago, with the city wheel tax, will collect $5,500,000. The remaining $253,000 from Chicagoans will go to downstate county highway departments, because the state in apportioning the 1 cent gas money among the counties does not allow for the excessive fuel consumption in Chicago, but distributes the 1 cent solely on the basis of registrations.

$51.76 Tax on Each Auto.

The 1932 tax paid by the average passenger car owner in Chicago will approximate $51.76. Under the relief program, $3.91 will go to charity. The state highway department will receive $29.69; the Cook county highway department, $5.35; the federal government, $4.15; the city, $10; and other county highway departments, 65 cents.

The bulk of the $16,331,000 collected for the state highway department will be spent on downstate roads. Before 1932 the state did not spend a penny on Chicago streets, although at the end of 1931 Chicago motorists had paid $103,355,000 to the state road fund and had yet to pay $131,688,000 to retire bonds and to complete the rural road bond systems.

This year, up to Oct. 1, the state highway department awarded contracts for Chicago construction involving an expenditure of $626,650. Little work has been done on these city projects.

Gasoline to Retire Bonds.

A $20,000,000 relief bond issue proposition on a referendum ballot next month would be retired from the counties' 1 cent portion of the gasoline tax. If this passes, $1,600,000 of Cook county's 1933 gas excise revenue will be required for interest and toward retirement of the bonds and these payments will continue for twenty years at a decreasing rate.

If the bond issue fails to pass, real estate tax rates will be boosted to cover charity expenditures. Regardless of the outcome of the referendum, the bill pending before the governor authorizes county boards to appropriate for relief work all of their unobligated portions of the counties' motor fuel tax revenue.

Little Benefit from Taxes.

The Chicago Motor club compiled these statistics as an argument against any further diversion of road funds. The figures show that the automobile owners of this city receive little direct special benefit from special taxes totaling $28,466,000 this year.

In 1931 Chicagoans paid $27,585,000 in special taxes, the state highway department receiving $17,113,000 and the city's streets getting nothing from the state. This $17,113,000 from Chicagoans was 43.5 per cent of the state's total revenue from the motor license fees and the state's 2 cent share of the gasoline tax.

In 1932, up to Oct. 1, the state highway department revenue from gasoline tax and license fees totaled $29,551,000. It is estimated that Chicagoans paid $12,922,000 of this total.

City's Taxes Spent Elsewhere.

The $12,922,000 paid to the state highway department by Chicago automobile owners in the first nine months of this year may be contrasted with the $626,650 worth of city street work for which the state contracted in this period.

In 1932 the Chicago motorists' donation to the federal government will cover the entire twelve months, the contribution to charity probably will be doubled, and the payments to the city wheel tax fund and to the state highway department probably will remain the same. The new governor and legislature will determine what relief will be given Chicago traffic in return for these taxes—whether, for example, the state will build the west side elevated highway.

U. S. Woman Saved from Plane in English Channel

PARIS, Oct. 14.—(AP)—Forced down in the English channel during a storm yesterday an American woman and other passengers in a seaplane flying from England to Egypt were rescued by a passing steamer today, after having spent the night on the water. The woman passenger was identified as a Mrs. Praecillad, formerly Jewitt James. The rescue vessel picked them up after the pilot of the airplane had sent up flares.

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 14.—(AP)—Worthington G. Fletcher, 23, of Cleveland, O., former Trinity student, died last night of injuries suffered in an automobile accident Wednesday in which two others were killed.

REVEAL JOKER IN CUT RATE CAB LICENSE PLAN

Drivers Could Operate Only as Individuals.

A joker in the proposal to give a permit to a cut rate taxicab company to put eleven cabs on Chicago streets was disclosed yesterday by Lieut. James Killackey, secretary of the public vehicle license commission.

If the permits requested by three aldermen and approved by Mayor Cermak are granted they will be given to the individual drivers of the company and not to the Public Taxi Service, Inc., Lieut. Killackey said. This would force the drivers to remove the company name from their cabs and operate as individuals.

No meeting of the license commission has been called to act on the permits, Lieut. Killackey said. However, he informed Attorney Lee Daniels, representing the new cab company, what the action of the commission will be if the permits are granted.

"Such licenses would be of no value to our independent operators," asserted Attorney Daniels. "If forced to operate in that way they would lose all the patronage the company has built up through its reduced rates among people who know us and call our garage for cabs. The public is suspicious of individual cabs. The company name makes a great difference in attracting patrons."

Lieut. Killackey said the proposed action of the committee would be in line with the recommendations of Ald. James B. Bowler [25th], John Toman [23d] and Oscar F. Nelson [46th], who urged that the Public cabs be given licenses to operate. This was confirmed later by Ald. Toman, but Attorney Daniels said he would see the aldermen and attempt to persuade them to change their recommendations.

HOOVER FORCES IN INDIANA SEE VICTORY AHEAD

Admit Gov. Roosevelt Is Leading Now.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—With a hastily revamped organization Republican leaders are battling desperately to turn back the Democratic tide sweeping Indiana. Glowing with the ardor generated by their new activities and the satisfaction of arousing the activities of others they exude confidence in eventual victory.

"We are not kidding ourselves," said one of the Republican big wigs of the state tonight. "If the election were tomorrow Roosevelt would get Indiana. But a mighty reaction in favor of Hoover is in progress, which is going to put Indiana in the Hoover column on Nov 8, you mark my word."

Claims Democratic Margin.

R. Earl Peters, Democratic state chairman, is predicting a 250,000 plurality for Roosevelt in a state that, with the exception of 1912, when the Republicans were split, has not given its electoral vote to a Democratic candidate for president since Cleveland carried it in 1884 and again in 1892. Coolidge got a 139,000 majority over Davis and La Follette in Indiana in 1924 and Mr. Hoover, who was none too popular here at any time, came through with a 286,000 plurality four years ago.

Mr. Hoover, however, was the beneficiary of the intense religious bigotry stirred by the candidacy of Al Smith in a state that had been owned body and soul by the Ku Klux Klan. Now the klan is dead and the religious factor lingers only to the extent that Al Smith's Catholic followers resent the McAdoo-Garner-Hearst deal that compassed the undoing of Al Smith in the late Chicago convention. And much less is heard of this factor since the famous handshake of Smith and Roosevelt at the New York convention.

The fact is that the Democratic trend in Indiana this year is no sudden development. It first made its appearance in the 1929 elections when two-thirds of the cities went Democratic. Then in 1930 the Democrats carried two-thirds of the counties, the big patronage dispensing offices of the state administration and all but four seats in the congressional delegation. Among the state officers the Democrats elected was secretary of state and that automatically gave them the preferred position on the ballot this year, which the politicians value at upward of 15,000 votes because of the propensity of voters to mark the first ticket their eyes fall upon.

On top of these developments came the depression, producing an enormous volume of unemployment in the highly industrialized steel region of Lake county, in Fort Wayne, South Bend Indianapolis, and numerous other manufacturing centers. At the same time agriculture was prostrate with thousands of farmers losing their farms through foreclosures. The dejection of these classes of the electorate translated itself here as everywhere else into sullen opposition to the party in power at Washington.

Lack of Funds Handicap.

The Democratic organization, fed with the pap of state patronage, took on new life and enthusiastically fanned the flames of discontent. On the other hand the once famed, invincible Republican organization built up by Senator Jim Watson fell into ruins for want of state patronage and subsidy from the treasury of the national party. Until a small donation from the Palmer house headquarters was forthcoming recently, the Indiana organization was compelled to depend almost entirely on the activities of postmasters who had been not only released from previous bans on political activity but spurred to engage the rein by Postmaster General Brown. The funds raised were almost entirely confined to assessments of federal job holders.

This was the state of affairs up to about a week ago. Mr. Hoover was exceedingly concerned by what he heard of conditions in Indiana. He had been advised not to come to Indiana by Republican leaders who appeared to think he would embarrass the candidacy of Senator Watson for reelection, though why was not exactly clear, for the senator defends and praises the President in almost every speech he makes. Others told the President that the inability of the state committee to function in behalf of Hoover and Curtis was the fault of Watson, who opposed the nomination of Mr. Hoover in 1928 and is commonly understood to be no more favorably disposed to him today.

Wants Club Organized.

Thereupon Mr. Hoover insisted upon the commitment of his candidacy specially to a Hoover and Curtis club, a branch of the national Hoover and Curtis club which was organized particularly for the purpose of looking after the interests of the presidential ticket in states dominated by original anti-Hoover leaders, whose loyalty in this election was suspected. Nathan W. MacChesney, in charge at the Palmer house headquarters of the formation of these clubs, dispatched George Kinsley to Indianapolis a fortnight ago to establish a branch here.

Mr. Kinsley soon got into a jam through failure to consult the state organization, Miss Dorothy Cunningham, the national committeewoman, and other powers that be. He tied up with one of the two embroiled factions in Marion county (Indianapolis) and was compelled to beat a retreat. He received only a glassy stare from Senator Jim, who had been opposed to the move all along.

Will Hays Visits State.

Then there appeared on the scene Will Hays, dispatched by the national committee as a trouble shooter. Mr. Hays, a Hoosier himself, had the reputation of being a great political organizer, which was gained, however, when he had unlimited funds to play with. It was thought that he would perform a miracle. He came, made a few "pep" talks, and then faded away shortly after Frederick Van Nuys, the Democratic candidate for senator, began firing off speeches recalling Mr. Hays' connection with the oil scandals of the Harding régime. The net result of the Hays visit was the appointment of former Judge Solon J. Carter, a Hays satellite, to manage the Hoover and Curtis club. Carter was busy today in hastily improvised headquarters telephoning county chairmen and getting them busy for Hoover. He said that the "reaction in favor of Hoover is coming fast."

"It's 1896 all over again," he said. "You remember how Bryan had the election won till people began thinking about the 'full dinner pail.' Now we find that in the industrial centers there is a swing back to Hoover on the part of voters who fear there will be no jobs at all if Roosevelt is elected."

Claims Change to Hoover.

Mr. Carter said that polls taken in the last few days compared with polls thirty days ago disclosed the change in favor of Hoover. He was unable to give any figures, however.

Miss Cunningham, radiant with enthusiasm, tells how the young voters are flocking to Hoover. She is promoting a new electioneering device. Hoover dances are being given or are to be given in every community. Each young man who dances must pledge himself to vote for Hoover and to bring a young woman similarly pledged.

The Republican state convention left much bitterness in Republican ranks. M. Burt Thurman, who built the Watson machine, was rejected by Watson for the nomination for governor and is not speaking to the senator now or lifting his finger for the ticket. Paul V. McNutt, the Democratic candidate for governor, is generally regarded a likely victor over the Republican nominee, Raymond Springer.

Watson Facing Battle.

Senator Watson is up against the hardest fight of his long public career. The bonus is figuring prominently as an issue. Watson has an ingenious explanation of his vote in the senate against immediate payment of the bonus. He cites his long record of support of pensions and bonus legislation and says he favors payment of the bonus when the government has the funds. The only way it could get the funds now would be to inflate the currency and make the dollar worth 25 cents.

"I would never vote to pay the bonus in 25 cent dollars," he winds up.

Van Nuys is advocating immediate payment of the bonus and its financing by inflation of the currency.

The prospect is that the Democrats will win nearly all the 12 seats in the congressional delegation. Representative Will Wood and other veteran Republican members are in danger of defeat.

BRITISH STEAMER HELD 36 HOURS BY PIRATES; LOOTED

Jewels Returned to U. S. and Canadian Women.

HONGKONG, Oct. 14.—(AP)—The British steamer Heikon came into port today after having been for 36 hours in the hands of pirates who distinguished themselves by according chivalrous treatment to Miss Edith Boynton, an American, and Mrs. Dirk Van Driest, a Canadian, two of the passengers.

The two women were kept captive in their cabins after their jewelry had been taken, but before the pirates abandoned the ship they returned the jewels.

"To think that I should have spent thirteen uneventful years in China and on the day I leave this should happen," said Miss Boynton.

Board Ship as Passengers.

Two Chinese passengers were detained by the police, who suspected that they might have been the leaders in the piratical expedition, which was carried out in the manner traditional in these parts.

The pirates, who had gone aboard as ordinary passengers, launched a sudden attack, rushed the bridge, disabled the wireless, and overpowered the officers, locking them as well as the passengers in cabins.

The pirates attempted to disguise the vessel by repainting the funnels. Once, when another ship appeared astern, they thought they were being pursued by a warship and they threatened to kill the officers if the other craft attempted to investigate. She passed without hail.

Four Passengers Kidnaped.

Loot from the Heikon was transferred to junks in Heichechin bay. One Chinese passenger jumped overboard and drowned and four were kidnaped for ransom. Shortly after the pirates had departed the destroyers Bruce and Wishart reached the Heikon. When the steamer came into Hongkong harbor it was suspected that several members of the looting expedition still were aboard, masquerading as passengers. On two previous occasions the Heikon was a victim of pirates.

Miss Boynton and Mrs. Van Driest said they were terribly anxious during the raid, but relieved when the pirates seemed to be amused by their phonograph.

Seize Burglar After He Robs Lake Forest Home

A burglar who had taken several watches and two cameras from the home of William Roy Carney, 56 North Western avenue, Lake Forest, was arrested early today by a watchman, Einar Rosen, as he was leaving the Carney yard. The man captured said he was Clarence Larson, 31 years old, and that he formerly lived in the Y. M. C. A. hotel in Chicago. Members of the Carney family were at their Chicago home when the burglary occurred.

LAWYER, 83, GIVES HEREDITY CREDIT FOR ACTIVE LIFE

Powers to Keep on with Practice.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

Millard R. Powers, Chicago lawyer, who will celebrate his 83d birthday today, said in his office in the Bankers building yesterday that a large part of the credit for his long career goes to heredity. Mr. Powers is the father of eight children.

The octogenarian declared that he couldn't see why he should think of retiring at 83. Many of his Irish, German, and Pennsylvania forbears, he said, lived vigorously into their middle nineties.

Credits Moderate Living.

"Moderation has done it," he said. "Every few months I have my doctor look me over. He tells me my heart is sound and normal and my general health excellent for my age. He also said I was the only patient he had who followed his advice. I don't exercise much, but I eat lightly—practically no meat, but about everything else the average person does. I go to bed at 10 o'clock and get up at six. I'm at the office at 7:45 and leave around 4 o'clock.

"I've never had a golf club in my hand, and I don't take annual vacations. I do like quail hunting, and my first rest in years was a ten day stay in Florida a year ago—on a case. My recreations are mostly reading, the theater and the moving pictures. I don't use tobacco and I don't indulge in any form of intoxicants. That's why I'm sound and enjoying my work. As for retiring, I haven't any intention of it."

Powers has practiced law in Chicago for 56 years, having come to the city with his brother in 1874 and founded the Metropolitan Business college, of which his brother, three years his junior, is still the active head. Six years ago he sued Samuel Insull for $2,500,000, charging violation of a gentlemen's agreement concerning operation of electric light systems in Illinois. The suit was settled out of court.

HOLDUP MAN JOINS HIS VICTIM IN HITCHING A RIDE HOMEWARD

Walter Seyler, 8240 Ridgeland avenue, told the Woodlawn police a strange tale of robbery and kidnaping yesterday morning. Seyler said he was leaving the home of friends at 69th street and Cregier avenue when four gunmen held him up and ordered him to drive to the country.

"But I've got an appointment to meet my wife in half an hour," Seyler protested. So when the city limits was reached a bandit took Seyler into a roadhouse so he could telephone his wife.

The bandits then made him drive out near Wilmington, Seyler said, where he was robbed of $100 and forced out of his car. As the bandits prepared to drive away one of them said: "I'm sick of this, I'm going back to Chicago." He got out of the car and joined Seyler as the others drove away, Seyler said. The robber and Seyler begged a ride from a passing motorist and were taken to 55th street and Lake Park avenue, where they both got out, Seyler said, and the repentent bandit disappeared.

COURTNEY TELLS PLAN TO PUT JOBS ON MERIT BASIS

Thomas J. Courtney, Democratic candidate for state's attorney, pledged yesterday to put the social service department of that office on a merit basis if elected, according to a statement made public by the social service nonpartisan committee of Cook county.

"I am heartily in accord with your position," Senator Courtney wrote to the committee, "that this department should be taken out of politics absolutely and that all social service positions should be filled by qualified workers of a high standard secured through examinations. I understand also that this department should be enlarged to meet certain needs, and it is my desire to meet this situation."

Indorsements of Mr. Courtney's candidacy as announced in a statement from his headquarters include those of the Illinois Motor Truck Operators' association, the advisory committee of the Spanish-American War Veterans' organization, the Jugo-Slavian Central organization, the Russian National Orthodox Society of St. George, and the Russian Independent Mutual Aid society.

MOVE TO BLOCK ROOSEVELT TALK AT LINCOLN TOMB

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—Announcement that the Democratic state committee's speakers' bureau had arranged to have Gov. Roosevelt make his Springfield speech, Oct. 21, at the tomb of Abraham Lincoln created a storm in Springfield today. Judge Ben S. Deboise of the Probate court voiced a protest against the "sacrilege" and Attorney Chauncey I. Jenkins served notice that he would apply for an injunction to prevent it unless the Democratic committee called off the meeting.

That the Democratic meeting be held at the Lincoln tomb probably was suggested by the fact that President Hoover spoke there recently, rededicating the rebuilt monument. The site affords an ideal natural sylvan theater for the accommodation of a great audience.

It is now probable that Gov. Roosevelt will deliver his speech at the arsenal. If he visits the Lincoln shrine on this occasion the visit probably will be apart from the political demonstration.

CALM FOLLOWS KILLING OF MINE PICKET AT TOVEY

Military to Rule on Trial of Guardsman.

BY PERCY WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Taylorville, Ill., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—The sort of sultry calm which presages upheaval hovered over this troubled coal mining area today after last night's shooting, when a striking digger was killed by a National Guard corporal who said that he had resisted arrest in the village of Tovey.

There virtually was no picketing at the two working mines this morning, in contrast to the disorder which prevailed the last few days, but two strikers were shot by state troopers, they claim, as they stumbled across a field in the half light of dawn to join a handful of others near the Hewittville mine on the Taylorville city limits.

The injured, Frank Kmet of Wenonah, shot in the hip, and Andy Krechnyak of Staunton, whose arm was torn by a bullet, were taken to their homes in nearby villages, where they were said to be not seriously hurt.

Late tonight guardsmen on duty at the Langleyville mine fired upon several men seen lurking around the powder house. The men disappeared and it was not known if any had been wounded.

Likely to Start Demonstration.

Many persons familiar with the situation here, which has been under control of the troops for almost a month, believe that the strikers will stage their next big demonstration on Sunday at the funeral services for Miner Andrew Ganis, 45 years old, who was killed by Corporal Russell M. Myers of company E, 130th infantry, National Guard, a Peoria unit.

Ganis lived in Tovey, one of the four little mining communities which grew, mushroomlike, about the four big pits of the Peabody Coal company in the Midland tract.

The Ganis funeral will be held from his home at 2 p. m. Sunday, where the cortège will gather. It will move then to Pawnee church, and finally to Taylorville cemetery. It was believed that a large crowd would want to attend the ceremonies, and the National Guard officers expect to be vigilant.

Several Versions of Slaying.

There are several versions of the killing. It was the subject of an exhaustive military inquiry this afternoon, a hearing which is to determine if Corporal Myers shall be court martialed. An interested observer was Carlos E. Black, adjutant general of the Illinois National Guard, who came over from Springfield. Presiding as head of the inquiry was Maj. Omer E. Davenport of the Illinois National Guard of Decatur.

Sitting with him were Capt. Mark Plaisted and Capt. Howard H. Bentley of Springfield, Capt. Amerigo Bonjean, Peoria, and Capt. E. A. Fabert, Champaign, all of the Illinois National Guard. The inquiry began early this afternoon and showed no signs of recessing late tonight. About 25 witnesses were waiting in a hotel lobby to testify, among them Mayor Thomas Foster of Tovey, who obtained warrants charging Lieut. Col. Robert W. Davis and Capt. Carl J. Meacham of Decatur of the Illinois National Guard with murder after the shooting. The military tribunal adjourned tonight to reconvene Wednesday.

Bullet Hits Coin in Pocket.

The version of the shooting given by Capt. Bentley was that Corporal Myers, leader of a patrol, had been asked by John Miller, a working miner in Tovey, to arrest men who were abusing him when he returned from work last night. Ganis was one of these men, the captain reported. When Ganis was ordered into the patrol car, another man behind him pulled a revolver and began firing at Myers. Myers aimed at Ganis' legs and returned the fire. The bullet struck a coin in Ganis' pocket and glanced. He died later at a hospital here.

Residents in Tovey have a different version. They claim that when ordered into a car Ganis told Myers to "Come and get me." One of the soldiers then said, according to this story: "I'm going to count three and if you don't come out of that yard I'll shoot." He counted three, fired, and Ganis fell, this version held.

About thirty strikers held in jail since yesterday were given their freedom tonight on Col. Davis' orders. A habeas corpus writ for their release was issued late in the day by Circuit Judge F. B. Dove of Shelbyville and made returnable for 10 a. m. tomorrow.

2 PICKPOCKETS WITH RECORDS FOUND GUILTY

Two pickpockets, both with long records, were found guilty yesterday in bench trials in the Criminal court. David [Yiddles] Cohen, 45 years old, was found guilty by Judge Rudolph F. Desort of picking the pocket of William Quick, 7124 Wentworth avenue, at the White Sox ball park on Sept. 5. Judge Desort ordered Cohen to appear for sentence on Oct. 21.

Joseph Berkowitz, 59 years old, was sentenced to one year in the house of correction by Judge Thomas J. Lynch on a three year old larceny charge. Berkowitz was arrested in April, 1929, on complaint of William Shields, 4651 Magnolia avenue, who charged that Berkowitz took $2 from his pocket. Berkowitz forfeited bond and fled. He was recaptured in August.

Details of the plan were contained in an order-in-council presented today in the house of commons.

FORFEITS BOND IN ROBBERY.

Municipal Judge Freeman L. Fairbank yesterday ordered the forfeiture of the $10,000 bond of Peter Stathas, 21 years old, 1013 Almond street, when Stathas failed to appear before him to answer a charge of participating in the $3,000 robbery on Aug. 16 of the Edgewater Trust and Savings bank.

Douglas Anderson, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in Pontiac reformatory; Bennie Maival, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 10 years in Pontiac reformatory by Judge Phillip L. Sullivan.

Edward Virothy, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in Pontiac reformatory by Judge Michael Feinberg.

Five years ago Lawrence Fragassi, grocer at 2300 West 69th street, bought a .45 caliber army revolver to protect his family and his cash register, after his oldest son had been killed in the store by holdup men. Yesterday his 15 year old daughter, Anna, a student at Lucy Flower technical High school, whipped out the same revolver, shoved in into the ribs of Max Shalowitz in the dry goods store at 3206 West Lake street, and ordered,

"Stick 'em up." He did.

But Shalowitz went into action too quickly after that for Anna and her school chum, Rose De Cook, 16 of 2816 Fletcher street. As they snatched $12 from the till and caught up a dress and a pair of pajamas from a rack and raced out of the store the gray haired clerk followed, shouting to them to drop the money or he would shoot. He waved a weapon which had been lying in reach, beneath the counter.

Hides Gun in Handbag.

Sergt. Frank Yore of the detective bureau stepped off a street car at the corner of Lake and Kedzie avenue as the chase reached that point and the girls darted south to Maypole avenue. Hat in hand, he pursued, outdistancing Shalowitz, and shouting to the latter not to shoot. Anna sought refuge in a passageway and, on finding herself discovered, attempted to pull the revolver from her handbag again. Yore seized her in time. The De Cook girl, who had seen the capture from across the street, also surrendered then.

At the detective bureau both were inclined to be defiant, but tears flowed copiously before long as they explained they had wanted some of the pretty dresses they had seen displayed. Rose was recognized by police as having been arrested for shoplifting two weeks ago on Milwaukee avenue. She was released because it was a first offense.

In her home above the grocery on West 69th street, Anna's mother wept as her youngest child was taken west in a police patrol to the Juvenile Detention home. Bewildered and heartbroken, she sobbed as she told how well Anna always had behaved, how quiet she was, and how good her school record.

Family Well Regarded.

"What will her father say?" she cried. "To think that my boy was killed in a holdup and now a child of mine should do a thing like that. Our good name is ruined. Why did she do it? She had all the clothes she needed and other people have lots less and get along all right. And only yesterday her father got a different job, because times are hard. Oh, when did she take that gun?"

The Fragassi family appeared to be favorably known in the neighborhood, where they have lived for several years.

SLAIN TURFMAN ONCE WEALTHY, POLICE DISCOVER

The colorful life of Carl H. Reese, murdered race track gambler, was reviewed by police yesterday in an endeavor to discover clews to his slaying on the Milwaukee road, north of Libertyville, last Wednesday. Meanwhile the questioning of Louis L. Howell, 5908 North Kostner avenue, was continued.

Reese, it was learned, inherited $150,000 from his father, a wealthy Detroit business man, about five years ago, but dissipated the fortune in three or four years. In addition to his activities as an owner of horses, bookmaker, tout, and gambler, Reese also was a high pressure salesman who sold athletic club memberships, it was discovered.

An "A1 Sucker."

Reese spent his money on the races as a bookmaker, a friend said. He was known as an "A1 sucker" among the racing fraternity. In the last year he was reduced to touting "good things" to his friends and incurred many enmities by giving out tips on horses that did not finish in the money, this friend said.

"He owed thousands of dollars to certain gamblers," said the informant. "It is possible that he was killed because of his debts."

To the many questions of State's Attorney A. V. Smith of Lake county, who is holding Howell in the Lake county jail, Howell continued to insist that he was not guilty of the murder.

Doesn't Believe Howell.

"I don't believe Howell's story that Reese was shot on the crowded Milwaukee road by four gunmen," said Prosecutor Smith. "His tale that he was then forced to drive the car with Reese's dead body to a place miles away, where the body was dumped out, is also improbable."

It was learned that Reese and Howell had been in business together in Indiana and that Howell had lost $18,000 in the deal. Howell insisted that he had no ill feeling toward Reese because of this loss.

An inquest will be held next Thursday at Waukegan. Howell will be held until then, Sheriff Lester Tiffany said.

BAR CONDEMNS SENATE DELAYS ON WILKERSON

Decries Radical Hostility Toward Judge.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—Condemnation of such senatorial opposition as has delayed confirmation of the promotion of Judge James H. Wilkerson of Chicago was voted today by the American Bar association in its 55th annual convention here.

C. E. MARTIN.

Though strongly supported by the Chicago and Illinois bar associations because of his handling of the Capone case, Judge Wilkerson's elevation to the Circuit Court of Appeals was held up by radical senators. At the last session they opposed it as the result of labor protests concerning Judge Wilkerson's record in labor injunctions.

Condemns Such Opposition.

The resolution adopted today by the bar association said:

"Whereas, Opposition to the confirmation of appointments of federal judges has been and is being made in the senate of the United States, predicated upon the disapproval of judicial decisions made by nominees in certain cases in which decisions have been rendered in accordance with precedent and in the performance of that high duty which calls for fearless and impartial determination of all issues under the established principles of law.

"The American Bar association deplores the efforts which have been and are being made to defeat confirmation on such grounds as inimical to the independence of the judiciary and respectfully requests the senate of the United States to refuse to permit opposition based on such grounds to have recognition and consideration in determining the fitness of judicial appointments."

Honors for Wigmore.

John Henry Wigmore, dean emeritus of Northwestern university law school, was awarded the 1932 medal of the American Bar association for the "most outstanding contribution to American jurisprudence."

The honoring of Dean Wigmore, the election of Clarence E. Martin of Martinsburg, W. Va., and an address this evening by Sir Rufus Isaacs, marquis of Reading, former lord chief justice of Great Britain, and viceroy of India, closed the sessions.

There will be a dinner tomorrow at which Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts of the United States Supreme court and Owen D. Young of New York will be the principal speakers.

In receiving the bar association's medal, Dean Wigmore follows former Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, recipient of the medal in 1931. Connected with Northwestern university since coming there as professor of law in 1893, Dean Wigmore is especially noted for his w rk on "Evidence." Presentation of the medal was by J. Weston Allen of Boston, former attorney general of Massachusetts.

Long Famous as Teacher.

"The bar of America has long recognized you as one of its foremost teachers and scholars," Mr. Allen said in presenting the medal to Dean Wigmore. He spoke of Dean Wigmore's writings, of the war work for which he was decorated by the United States and France, and of his leadership at Northwestern.

"Under your guidance," said Mr. Allen, "that institution with constantly advancing scholastic standards has become one of the foremost law schools in the country."

Replying, Dean Wigmore said that he accepted the medal "as a symbol of that recognition which you desire to extend to the aggregate" of the teachers of law.

Talks of Newer India.

Lord Reading spoke of the impending task of drawing up a new constitution for India and said:

"I beg you to remember whenever you hear attacks on the British that for more than 150 years they have carried this burden in the east, that they have taught Indians the language of freedom and of constitutional government, that they have given the example of purity and probity in administration, that they have demonstrated the devotion of youth to public service in India, that they have consistently manifested the desire to conciliate India whilst insisting upon the preservation of order according to law."

"OREGON BOOTS" COOL ARDOR OF JAIL BREAKERS

Sheriff Walter Faulkner of Everett, Wash., arrived at the detective bureau yesterday to take back to his home town three youths who slugged a jailer and escaped while they were awaiting trial for robbery. The robbers, all husky young men, were awaiting him, but the Chicago police expressed doubt that it was safe for one man to try to guard three on so long a trip.

"That's easy," said Faulkner. "I brought the Oregon boots with me."

These articles are twenty pound steel rings which are locked on the legs of each of the prisoners. Their hands are then chained and linked with the leg irons. As the key was mailed to Everett by the sheriff, his prisoners will have to wear the boots until they get there. The men are Julian Ferguson, 28 years old; Theodore Olson, 23 years old, and Gerald Weber, 24 years old.

ROTARY CHARITY DRIVE.

Plans for the annual campaign to raise funds for the needy were made yesterday by the chest fund committee of the Rotary club at a meeting in the Hotel Sherman. A goal of $12,000 has been set for the drive, which opens next Tuesday.

COW DINES OUT IN GOTHAM, BUT REFUSES TO ACT

Bull Makes Goat of 3 Press Agents.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 14.—[Special.]—This is a story of three rival press agents and a cow in Times square and how a bull made a goat out of all concerned in the bit of barnyard hoaxing.

Now it is an accepted fact that there are almost as many press agents in the vicinity of Broadway as there are vacant hotel rooms. There is, however, a dearth of cows. So this afternoon when a fat Holstein was uncrated in 45th street to meet the needs of a couple of temperamental comedians in a music show who couldn't act their best playing to a dummy cow things began to happen.

The first thing that happened was an idea in Nat Dorfman's head.

"I'll put that cow in the papers," said Mr. Dorfman.

His Second Mistake.

Whereupon the P. A. issued instructions and absented himself from the neighborhood. It was his second mistake, the idea of dining the cow being the first.

Bossy was pushed protestingly through the swinging door of Sardi's, an eating place where near celebrities go to see their pictures on the wall and visitors go to see the near celebrities. A crowd of about 500 persons gathered outside.

Bossy mooed her disappointment when she found out that pate de foie gras was not at all as it sounded and was a pie instead of a pasture plant. Vincent Sardi, the owner, was nonplused, but not too nonplused to telephone the city editors.

And then along came C. P. Greneker, another theatrical press agent. He waved his cane and thought fast.

"Pretty neat, that cow stunt," whispered Greneker. "It's mine. Just write in your stories that 'Miss Bossy, who is playing at our theater, dined at Sardi's today!'"

Mr. Dorfman arrived beaming. He listened and the beam changed to a frown. He began to explain, but the press had followed the steak on hoof to the sidewalk where she had got loose and was in the mood to run amuck.

Kicked in the Stomach.

Patrolman Ellis Smith, a former Nyack farmhand, hove into view and sought to handcuff the cow to the plaudits of the growing crowd. The first thing Patrolman Smith did was to get kicked in the stomach. Then he gave up trying to handcuff the cow to the plaudits of the crowd and began trying to find out whose cow it was. Meanwhile Bossy ambled down an alley.

"Never met the lady," insisted Mr. Greneker.

Mr. Dorfman had long since retired to his office to write an account of his dining cow.

AL CAPONE'S SON IS TREATED FOR EAR INFECTION

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—With a bodyguard of six stalwart protectors, Al Capone's 14 year old son, Alphonse Jr., familiarly known as "Jiggs" in the family circle, but registered under the name of "Clark," was under treatment at Johns Hopkins hospital last week-end for an ear infection, it was revealed today.

With young Capone was his mother, who remained with her son during his examination and treatment, leaving him only at night for a downtown hotel where she has been staying.

The boy was entered as a private patient at the Harriet Lane Memorial, a building reserved for children. While he went through the formula of registration and examination the six guards are said to have been stationed o

Once in Jail

New York, Oct. 14.—(AP)—The New York American hears the Arcnduke Leopold of Austria, central figure in the Napoleonic necklace sensation of last year, has been married to Mrs. Alicia Gibson Coburn, socially prominent here and in Canada. Verification was not obtainable.

Leopold arrived here July 31 from Europe and the ship's manifest showed that he described himself as divorced from his former wife, who was the Baroness Dagmar. When divorce proceedings were started last year in Venice Leopold said he would marry Mrs. Coburn.

Mrs. Coburn befriended the dashing Leopold last year when he was in Tombs prison here. He spent some time there before a trial at which he was acquitted of grand larceny in connection with the sale of a $150,000 diamond necklace owned by his aunt, Archduchess Marie Theresa of Austria. The necklace was one Napoleon is reported to have given the Empress Marie Louise.

SUPREME COURT ORDERS HAAS' NAME ON BALLOT

The Illinois Supreme court handed down an opinion yesterday at Springfield reversing Judge William J. Lindsay of the Superior court, who issued an injunction restraining the election commissioners from placing on the Municipal court ballot the name of Attorney Joseph F. Mall, who was nominated in the last Republican primary under the name of Joseph F. Haas. It ordered the name of Haas placed on the ballot.

Mall changed his name legally two years ago, taking the same name as the late Joseph F. Haas, for many years county recorder. At a hearing before Judge Lindsay it was charged that he continued to use the name of Mall in all his ordinary business transactions and adopted the name of Haas solely for political purposes because of the popularity of the late recorder.

Mall and his attorney will appear this morning before Judge Lindsay, at which time they are expected to present the mandate of the Supreme court and ask that Judge Lindsay dissolve his injunction and order the name of Haas placed on the ballot.

The Chicago Bar association has started disbarment proceedings against Mall because of his conduct in the name changing case.

BALK PLOT TO KIDNAP DOCTOR AND MILLIONAIRE

Redlands, Cal., Oct. 14.—(AP)—Officers announced today they had thwarted a plot to kidnap for ransom Clarence G. White, multi-millionaire Cleveland philanthropist, and Dr. Charles Lombard, wealthy Redlands, Cal., physician.

Three suspects were arrested after midnight near the home of Dr. Lombard. In the car of the three, officers said, they found rope and sheets.

Arrests followed several days of investigation after a servant in the home of Dr. Lombard had reported receiving a letter in which he was offered $1,000 for a floor plan to the home and for information regarding the family.

Officers reported that on searching the room of one of the suspects in San Bernardino they found a stenciled letter in which ransom was demanded and which brought in the name of White as an intended victim.

White is a brother of Rollin White, president of the White Motor Truck company. He has maintained a winter home here for 10 years.

Book Business Sets a Record in Biographies

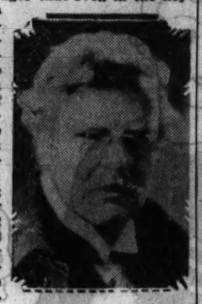
"Chaucer," by G. K. Chesterton. [Farrar & Rinehart.]
"Charlotte Brontë," by E. F. Benson. [Longmans-Green.]
"The Life of George Eliot," by Emilie and Georges Romieu. [Dutton.]
"Samuel Butler," by Clara G. Stillman. [Viking.]

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

I HAVE not before me the statistics for the history of publishing concerning the number of titles on one subject published during a given period of time, but I would be willing to wager that even in the heyday of a book a minute to supply the creatures who are born at the rate of one a minute, no thirty-six days in the history of publishing has ever produced four critical biographies of the creators of the classics better than the four listed at the top of this column.



G. K. CHESTERTON.

Perhaps literature has taken a new trend from the dep[illegible]on and there is a deeper interest in serious books on the part of the public. Certainly books which sell for $4, $3.75 [two of them do], and $2.50 could not in a period of depression be experimented with by publishers if there was no sale for them, and the fact that four different houses have found profitable serious critical biographies of writers who have already been written about at length and definitively is certainly indicative of the fact that the public's mind and pocketbook are turned or can be turned to that mysterious subject of which Ecclesiastes of the Old Testament said there is no end "to the making of many books."

"And much study is a weariness of the flesh" [which completes the quotation], was probably truer of ancient days than it is of today, else few would be reading and none buying anything but fluff to amuse themselves with, the way a child might pluck a piece of down with a sticky finger from another sticky finger and so on for a whole afternoon of drugging itself to time and the world.

Not that anodynes aren't legitimate and useful in a life of pain and strife. A book is a godsend that will make one forget the depression and "the rising stock market" as our friend Mortimer Quick says, and the fact that next Thursday is Aunt Nellie's birthday and she's had a half liter of White Rose from the family every birthday since Uncle Ned passed away and could no longer provide her with that tender olfactory reminder of her wedding day and for the price of a half liter of White Rose at the present tariff and rate of exchange you would be willing—for cash—to sell the family house and lot.

But if life is harder, it is perhaps realer and more earnest, and we find, in hard times, fascinating the life stories of men and women who found it so and to whom the grave was certainly not its goal nor theirs. These four all achieved immortality in the sense that one of the writers chronicled today, George Eliot, asked for in "O may I join the choir invisible of those immortal dead who live again in minds" (That's just about enough of this familiar quotation business). Let's get down to the real business of this piece, which is the consideration of four excellent, understanding and interpretive volumes, all written in varying degrees with skill and charm and brilliance.

"Chaucer," to begin in the fourteenth century, is G. K. Chesterton in his best mood, brilliant, amusing and vastly more informative than the reader realizes when he is having his little private laugh. It is a mediaeval tapestry with Chaucer the large central figure, but with every detail of the surrounding picture so perfect that the onlooker—the reader—isn't sure whether it's a monument to the father of English letters or to his age.

Charlotte Brontë and George Eliot were contemporaries, and it is extremely interesting to look at the nineteenth century through the eyes of the modern Englishman and the modern Frenchman and French woman in E. F. Benson's biography of Charlotte Brontë and Emilie and Georges Romieu's "The Life of George Eliot," especially as the Romieus' previous biography of the Brontës is one of the classics on the subject. Mr. Benson has done a superb job of Charlotte, and perhaps with the Romieus' life of the Brontës a reader need read no other biography except to add to his impressions. He will have all of the essentials in those two books.

The Romieus' George Eliot is written in the same exciting, dramatic manner that characterized their life of the Brontës and interprets the woman so little understood in her day.

Clara G. Stillman calls Samuel Butler "a mid-Victorian modern," and a mid-Victorian modern would be of necessity an adventurer of the mind, if you mean, as she does, that he was a modern in spirit though mid-Victorian in time. How difficult and how exciting it was being modern those days the author tells her readers with gusto.

Selected Poems, by L. A. G. Strong [Knopf], present the author in many moods and on many subjects.

American Culture, Literature Studied by Grant C. Knight

Grant C. Knight, associate professor of English at the University of Kentucky, has written in "American Literature and Culture" [Long and Smith] an analysis of an interpretation of our cultural development which the student of literature should not miss.

The book is divided into three parts "The Literature of Colonization," "The Literature of Romanticism" and "The Literature of Realism," in which the author traces the effects that changes in culture, brought on by various developments in the activities and interests of the American people, have had upon the literature of each period.

The last part of the books gives a thorough and penetrating account of the development of realism in modern American literature, the reasons for its development and its manifestations in contemporary literature. Theodore Dreiser, Frank Norris, Edith Wharton, and Sherwood Anderson are studied with especial attention.

Revised Edition of 'Woodrow Wilson and His Work' Is Timely

A revised edition of "Woodrow Wilson and His Work," by William E. Dodd [Brewer, Warren & Putnam], is being distributed by Peter Smith. The author, an American historian and chairman of the history department of the University of Chicago, has made corrections throughout the text and rewritten the final chapter. "The Breaking of Woodrow Wilson," which considers with perspective the significance of the final defeat of Wilson. The book is a careful study of the personality of the war President, emphasizing the tragic and inevitable rôle that American history has allotted him. "Woodrow Wilson and His Work" is also an interpretation and an analysis of the times in which the President lived.

"Chicago Families" Gives Useful Data for Social Workers

In "Chicago Families," by Day Monroe [University of Chicago Press] are revealed the unpublished data of the 1920 census in Chicago. The assumptions of this book are based on the careful study of 28,373 representative Chicago families. Facts about the general characteristics of Chicago families, about the households, the domicile status, the size and composition of families, the burden of the care and support of dependent children, gainful employment of members of Chicago families, and the earning homemakers in the city are revealed.

Edward J. O'Brien Writes 'True Story' of Nietzsche

Edward J. O'Brien says of his book "Son of Morning" [Brewer Warren and Putnam], a biography of Friedrich Nietzsche: "It has been my aim in this book to tell the true story of Nietzsche's life for the first time. Until now most of what was significant in his career has been either unperceived or suppressed. The paramount importance of his relationship to Cosima Wagner has been partially perceived or suspected by several French and German writers, but an attentive reader of the present narrative will soon find that even Andler has missed some of the most important points." The author of this stimulating biography is internationally known for his yearly anthologies of short stories.

Noted English Lawyer Offers Book on Living

E. S. P. Haynes' Success Makes Authors Happy.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—It is curious to observe what anonymity will do for a book. One of the most quietly popular publications of the late summer season in England has been a small work entitled "A Lawyer's Notebook," which was issued without the author's name.

It was clear from the reviews that the identity of the lawyer was no very deep secret, but the general public did not know the secret. Mystified, it asked for the book and when it found that this was really one of the most delightful collections of comments upon life, letters, morals, and manners that has been published for some time it rallied to "A Lawyer's Notebook" as one man.

Everybody has been pleased at the success, anonymously achieved, of one of the best known and best liked solicitors in London, who is the friend of half the writers in the country. E. S. P. Haynes, the solicitor in question, has written a number of earlier works. I should say that none of them has ever had the good fortune of the present book. It can be commended to all who enjoy honesty, conservatism, genuine unconventionality (as opposed to that laborious unconventionality which is the literary fashion among the pretentious), and humor.

Mr. Haynes is the friend of Hilaire Belloc, G. K. Chesterton, H. G. Wells and a hundred others. He has no doubt acted professionally for many of these friends. He has probably received the dedications of more books than any other living Englishman. He figures even upon the dedication pages of such stanch musical highbrows as Prof. E. J. Dent. He is a great gourmet, a lover of wine, an old Etonian who believes the Etonian education, and a classical education at that, is the best possible preparation for wider life. And he can write. Mr. Haynes is in himself a complete refutation of the current belief that 'characters' no longer exist. A novelist of genius could make him immortal.

And, speaking of novelists of genius who make characters immortal, I must mention that the issue in parts of the new and beautiful edition of "Pickwick" which Messrs. Sotheran [under the style of "The Piccadilly Fountain Press"] undertook some months ago is just completed.

Twenty parts can now be bound in two handsome volumes, and will be a treasure for all lovers of Dickens. I can imagine no form in which it would be more delightful to read and possess "The Pickwick Papers." Here are all the original illustrations, excellently printed in the best style. Here is a text the authenticity of which is guaranteed by the name of the editor, J. H. Stonehouse.

There is definitely a revival in Dickens and other Victorian novelists. Readers are finding that while they admire very greatly the frigid performances of modern English writers [who lack the robustness and richness of their American rivals], they cannot re-read them. They find they can re-read the Victorians. And the greatest of the Victorians is Dickens. Hence the revival.

BRITISH BEGIN 'PEACE' PARLEY WITH DE VALERA

Head of Irish Free State 50 Years Old.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 14.—The negotiations between Great Britain and the Irish Free State on the question of settling the economic dispute commenced at 10:30 o'clock this morning.

The Free State is represented by President Eamon de Valera; Sean MacEntee, minister of finance; James Geoghegan, minister of justice, and Conor Maguire, attorney general. The British delegation is composed of Secretary for Dominions J. H. Thomas, Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain, Secretary of War Lord Hailsham and Attorney General Sir Thomas Inskip.

Resume Parley Today.

The conversations continued until 1 o'clock and were resumed again at 3. The conference adjourned at 5 o'clock this evening when an official communique was issued stating that the conversations will be resumed at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. No indication of the progress of the conversations was given.

The conference hinges on Irish land annuities which the Free State government has refused to remit to London. The annuities dispute precipitated a fierce tariff war between the two countries.

A Dublin inspired message which was published in the London evening press declared that De Valera proposes to l e a counter claim against the British g rnment for nearly a billion and a half dolla with respect to "over-taxation" of the Free State by Great Britain since the act of Union [1801].

Bases Claim on British Report.

He bases the claim on the report of the commission appointed by the British government in 1894. The report decided that the increase of taxation placed on Ireland between 1853 and 1860 was not justified by the then existing circum ances and that, while the actual tax revenue in Ireland is about one-eleventh of that of Britain, the relative taxable capacity of Ireland is much smaller.

Today was De Valera's 50th birthday and he received many messages of congratulations. He smiled happily as he walked from his hotel to Whitehall.

British Labor Chief Deported.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Oct. 14.—Tom Mann, British left wing labor chieftain, was deported today after serving as a pallbearer at the funeral of one of two victims of this week's jobless riots. Mann came here to address unemployed meetings.

The labor leader was escorted to the boat for Heysham, Lancashire, by four policemen and was ordered to remain in his cabin until the boat sailed.

"Police stopped me as I was leaving the funeral," Mann said aboard the vessel. "I was asked to accompany them to the police station, and about twelve officers took me in an armored car. Later I was seen by the commissioner of police, and I told him that I was here to bring revolutionary greetings from English comrades to our Irish friends who are fighting aggression.

No Luck with Police.

"When I told him I intended to address a demonstration and leave Ireland on Sunday, he said that was impossible. While I was in the station I tried my best to convert the police to communism, but I don't believe I had much success."

Police charge that Mann came to Belfast to organize a general strike. He has been associated with labor movements for many years and was at one time president of the International Transport Workers' federation.

U. S. DRY AGENT IS ACCUSED IN ASSAULT CASE

New York, Oct. 14.—[Special.]—Willard J. Mogland, a prohibition agent attached to the Chicago division, was held without bail by United States Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter for having assaulted Edwin James Murphy, a New York agent, with intent to kill, at prohibition headquarters on Washington street today.

WILLARD J. MOGLAND.

Mogland, who was formerly on duty in this district and helped to make the case against Belle Livingston, night club hostess, was sent to Bellevue hospital for observation for a period of fifteen days by Judge Francis G. Caffey.

According to Assistant United States Attorney Jacob J. Rosenblum, Mogland is a world war veteran, about 35 years old. He suffered from shell shock for some time after the war. He was transferred to Chicago about three months ago.

This morning Mogland appeared unexpectedly at prohibition headquarters and went to the agents' squad room on the tenth floor. He accosted Murphy, angrily accusing him of being responsible for his transfer to Chicago. Murphy denied the accusation and then, as Mogland drew a revolver, grappled with him. A shot went wild and Mogland was subdued.

U. S. DRY RAIDERS MOP CITIES IN LA SALLE COUNTY

Ottawa, Ill., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—One hundred federal agents from Illinois, Indiana, and Wisconsin under the direction of A. E. Aman, federal prohibition agent from Ottawa, made a series of forty-five federal raids in Ottawa, Streator, La Salle, Oglesby, and other La Salle county cities tonight, seizing large stocks of liquor. The proprietors of the places where liquor was seized were arrested and brought to Ottawa for arraignment before T. E. White, United States commissioner.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

THE PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE AS GOVERNOR.

Franklin Roosevelt was born in 1882 and until 1928 his course runs along without much distinctive incident. He went to Harvard as a hundred thousand others have; he was admitted to the bar and practiced law as a hundred thousand others have; he was elected to the New York senate and resigned, becoming assistant secretary of the navy, one of the society jobs at Washington which have been filled by thousands of other men. He became a member of boards of overseers and trustees, combining Harvard and Vassar in this fashion.

His life until 1928 runs the course of almost any life begun in favorable circumstances, but in 1928 we come to something. Al Smith, brown derby Tammanyite, is running for President and he sees to it that Franklin Roosevelt, college trustee, Episcopalian, ex-Harvard overseer, from the aristocratic side of the fence, is nominated for governor of New York state. Although Smith is defeated, Roosevelt is elected and two years later reelected. He has had four years as governor of the greatest state in the Union—they constitute his public life and they run parallel with Herbert Hoover's four years in the White House.

The test of Gov. Roosevelt is in those four years, but his Republican opponents seem to have agreed with him that nothing particular need be said about them. Early in the campaign the governor exposed himself to a tart rejoinder, but the subject was not pursued. He spoke severely of the Washington attitude toward the stock market and was reminded that New York, of which he is the head, contains Wall street. Republicans recalled the fact that when life insurance had created a problem if not a scandal affecting the entire country a Republican, Mr. Hughes, first as counsel for an investigation and then as governor of New York, had found a remedy. That rejoinder was pertinent and apparently it was effective, but thereupon the relation of Gov. Roosevelt as an executive to the questions he was discussing as a candidate was dropped.

Until recently the Republicans appear to have reasoned that if they remained in the dugout nothing would hit them and if they raised their heads they'd connect with a cabbage or an egg. Gov. Roosevelt acquired some merit in handling Jimmie Walker, but Jimmie was writing his own ticket until a New York Republican senate brought him to light. Tammany was not disturbed by a searchlight with Mr. Roosevelt behind it.

A four year record as governor of the most populous and richest state in the Union should shed light on its maker's qualifications for the presidency. It should be offered in evidence by the side it will help.

MONARCHY IN MANCHURIA.

Rumor in the far east is often picturesque or colorful or romantic and always plentiful if not often reliable. One of the most interesting examples is that which two months or so ago reported a movement in Mongolia to join with Manchuria, or Manchukuo, in the formation of a new state under a monarchical government. The former emperor of China, now president of Manchukuo, would be the monarch, with an aristocracy or nobility formed of former grandees. For the preceding three months, said the report, Manchu noblemen and Mongol princes or chieftains had been visiting Changchun, the present capital of Manchukuo, in increasing numbers, and as they returned home evidence of unrest appeared in the Mongol territory. A step in the movement already had been taken in the Barga district of northern Manchuria, which is to be reorganized as a province of Manchukuo. This was a result of a conference of Mongol leaders, under the presidency of Prince Gui Fui, who has taken an important post in the Pu-yi administration at Changchun, his son succeeding him as administrator of the new province.

Now the Associated Press reports that emissaries from China proper have been discussing the possibilities of a monarchist restoration, with Manchukuo as a center, and while Tokio is, of course, suspected of having a hand in the new development, it seems to us more plausibly explainable as a genuine expression of Manchuria nationalism than the creation of Manchukuo. The Manchus and Mongols can have little understanding of or liking for the modernism and republicanism of the revolutionary leaders in China. The region is pastoral and a monarch or supreme head of the state who preserved the religious and imperial traditions of the Manchu régime would be more comprehensible than a newfangled presidency. Pu-yi is the Son of Heaven and a Manchu. It is by no means impossible that despite the present domination of Japan the so-called puppet at Changchun may be able to count upon more loyalty than his predecessors. The 30,000,000 Chinese immigrants who, according to the Tokio official version, declared their independence of China and selected Pu-yi for the head of their creation are probably not so favorable. But their major interest is not political and, in spite of radical agitation, they might in time accept another Manchu ruler.

The prospect of the establishment of a new kingdom, under the patronage of Tokio, seems at this distance not merely fanciful, nor need such a state be a mere artifice of Japanese imperial policy. In fact, it might develop a solidity of its own and become an important factor in the balance of power in the far east. It would represent in such case a formidable subtraction from the main Chinese nation, but there is nothing inevitable in the political unity of all Chinese. On the contrary, there are substantial considerations of a political and economic nature favoring what Count Uchida has called "the fissiparous tendency," or division of China into several independent states. No one can foretell whether the centripetal forces in the long run will be stronger than the centrifugal.

THE POSTOFFICE CHRISTMAS TREE.

A Wilmette citizen wrote to Vox Pop to say that this north shore town, on the postoffice department's gift list, did not need and did not want an edificial mail cage and decorative postmaster's home. An encouraging number of the proposed beneficiaries of the salvaged remnants of Postoffice Jack Garner's Christmas tree have responded to their supposed good luck by saying that they did not want the darned things. However, it is a great temptation to a town to take a monument when monuments are being offered. It is human nature for one to say that if it does not take the offering another town will ask for it.

The towns, however, might make something of the suggestion that the utility of the edifices be increased. A town of 3,000 does not need a postoffice costing $65,000. A postmaster cannot move his family in and plant vegetables in the back yard, but the town could use the building as a dance hall, assembly room, moving picture theater, lecture hall, gymnasium, and meeting place for the young men's oratorical, literary, and pleasure club. The postoffice department could join up with the various social services of the federal government. There might even be locker room for tools for the barberry division of the department of agriculture and apparatus for the buffalo tick unit. If such an idea does not gain favor then let it be suggested that the government offer any town wanting a postoffice on the grand scale the capitalized value of the rent paid for mail quarters and permit the town to build and maintain any sort of monumental edifice it craves.

SUBSIDIZED BARBARITY.

What life is like in a Florida prison camp has been told in detail by a number of prisoners who have testified in the murder trial of two former camp officials. The testimony may have exaggerated the inhumanities considerably and still there is little room to doubt that a convict labor gang is subjected to brutalities which enlightened communities have not permitted for a century and more.

Some of these convict labor gangs in the deep south are employed in road construction. The United States government contributes a part of the cost of the roads upon which the convicts are employed. Plainly the time has come when the representatives in congress of the more enlightened states must insist that none of the federal road subsidy is to be given to states which will spend it in the promotion of prison gang barbarities.

Road subsidies from the federal government have little justification at best. They take the money of the taxpayers in the more civilized states and spend it for local benefits in backward communities. This injustice is bad enough at best; when to it is added the fact that the money parceled out is devoted to the furtherance of savagery any justification the subsidies may have had in theory disappears.

When Florida puts convicts to work building and maintaining her roads the state saves a considerable part of the ordinary cost of a highway system. Her roads are cheap enough. She does not need any subsidy.

Editorial of the Day

[The Baltimore Sun.]

The Literary Digest makes light of Prof. Claude E. Robinson's conclusion that the important thing about a straw vote is the light it throws on the probable percentages of the popular vote candidates are likely to receive in an approaching general election. It must be admitted that Prof. Robinson goes to an extreme when he declares in his recently published book on straw votes that percentages are more important than the standing of candidates. Just how the standing of candidates could be fixed without a consideration of percentages it is difficult to perceive, and vice versa.

Nevertheless, the question of percentages is the thing that merits the most careful consideration in connection with straw ballots, and a study of percentages in the presidential straw vote the Literary Digest is now taking is absolutely essential to any understanding of that vote's significance. The Digest has now published the returns from 793,089 ballots in twenty states. Of this number, 404,992, or 50.7 per cent, were cast for Gov. Roosevelt; 325,845, or 40.8 per cent, were cast for President Hoover, and the remainder for the Socialist candidate and the minor parties.

The figures are instructive. They show that Gov. Roosevelt not only has a lead over President Hoover but an actual majority over all candidates combined. A candidate who occupies such a position in a poll of nearly 800,000 voters in twenty states one month before the election is clearly in a position just as advantageous as the Maine returns showed Gov. Roosevelt to be. The advantage of the Democratic candidate appears the most impressive when the percentage of variation between the Digest poll and the final electoral count in 1928 is considered. In that year, at this stage of the count, the Literary Digest poll overestimated the Republican strength in the twenty states under consideration by 9 per cent, and underestimated the Democratic strength by the same margin. The error would seem to be accounted for by the fact that the Literary Digest list of names is compiled from telephone directories, automobile registrations and other data covering principally the more well to do families in the various localities.

Allowing for a similar margin of error in the returns now currently available, Gov. Roosevelt would be destined to receive nearly 60 per cent of the total vote in the twenty states covered, while President Hoover's percentage would be something like 31. These figure are probably extreme, for the shift from the Republican to the Democratic side may easily have been greater among the families represented in the Literary Digest's list than among those not so represented. But even so, the present figures suggest the probability that Gov. Roosevelt will get considerably more than half the popular vote in the states so far enumerated in the Literary Digest poll.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

AND SO THEY CALL IT SUNNY CALIFORNIA.

Washington, D. C.—The commission from California appointed by the state to look over the government buildings in Washington and select the ones they want arrived today. They first looked over the capitol which has been promised to California to be set up on the coast somewhere near Los Angeles and used as a bathing pavilion. The commission also carefully scanned the Washington monument, which the Californians want as an aerial station. The California commission insists that the Republican national committee told them they could have the White House and go to Pasadena with it. From a member of the Republican national committee who requested his name be not given it was learned that what the Republican committee said was that unless they carried the election in November California could have the White House and go with it to a certain place, but Pasadena was not the locality named.

In the event that California stays in the Republican column on Nov. 8 residents of California now in Washington say the state has been promised a great deal in the way of patronage. The California committee say that it is generally understood by the residents of their state that the Republicans have promised, if successful, and California does its share, that every citizen of the state over the age of twenty-one will be appointed a first class postmaster. There is some feeling over the matter in California, as a good many citizens do not wish to be appointed first class postmasters, but prefer to be ambassadors, foreign ministers, generals in the army, associate judges of the Supreme court, or to receive a life pension from the government of twenty-five thousand dollars a year. But there seems to be a misunderstanding about this, too, for a man high in administration circles, whose name also cannot be disclosed, said that if the Republican spellbinders now speaking in California had not promised the Californians any job they wanted from keeper of the dog pound to ambassador to England it was an oversight and will be remedied at once.

THINGS THAT COUNT.

The most are never
Those that last Forever.

They are small,
Quicksilver things,
Brushing by
On wings:

Little joys
Vanishing
In vapor;

Sudden beauty
Seen in flight,
Momentary,
Bright;

That deep glance,
So brief, so rare,
Two friends' eyes
May share.

FERRY ADAMS.

AND NO MATTER how the election goes it means more unemployment. Think of all the straw vote collectors that will be out of jobs.

"OLD RESIDENT Arrested for Immortality."—Country Newspaper. And served him right. In these days of unemployment, bread lines, and relief bureaus a man who insists on living forever ought to be arrested. But ding it! we have to provide him with board and lodging even in jail.

THE PRESIDENT'S HAND is reported black and blue, badly swollen, and somewhat lacerated after shaking hands with three thousand visitors day before yesterday. And it didn't mean anything; it was just a habit. Lots of the people who shook hands with Mr. Hoover will rush home and boost for Roosevelt, and many of the people who shake hands with Mr. Roosevelt will vote for Mr. Hoover. What this country needs is a big, brawny prize fighter with cauliflower ears to serve as Grand Official Hand Shaker of the United States. He would attend all the White House functions and after the President had appeared, spoken his little piece, and bowed himself out the frenzied mob could file past and shake the hand of the Grand Official Hand Shaker of the United States. And they would be just as happy. All they want is to shake hands with somebody, it doesn't matter especially who.

LEAVES.

When little loves have gone the way of leaves
That fall through sunlight of an Autumn day,
The heart becomes a gaunt ghost tree that grieves
With the cold wind for each leaf flown away.
For each red Autumn leaf has left behind
And each gold-copper leaf gone with the wind
Bears the reflection of calm Summer moons.

The Summer moons that glided in the sky
As lovers walked in silence two by two,

VACCINATION AGAINST DIPHTHERIA.

It seems probable that decrease in diphtheria will be the outstanding feature of the public health progress of this decade, just as similar declines in cholera, smallpox, malaria, consumption, and typhoid fever have characterized public health achievements in other ten year periods. Should the present rate of decline continue until 1939, diphtheria in the large cities will be almost unknown by the beginning of the next decade.

A good example of what is being done is supplied by New Haven. In 1921 there were 482 recorded cases of diphtheria, with 22 deaths among the population of that city. In 1923 the policy of vaccination of school children, and children of less than school age, was begun. In 1927 there were but 52 cases of diphtheria and but three deaths from the disease in the city. In 1930 there were but 14 cases and one death. In 1931 there were 4 cases and no deaths. In the first seven months of 1932 there were two deaths, one of these being a school child. This is the first death of a school child from this disease in that city in four years.

Fifty thousand children have been vaccinated against diphtheria in this period of time in New Haven. This is one of the best showings that has ever been made, but, unfortunately, there are some children who have not been reached, for one reason or another.

This unfortunate boy, the first to die from diphtheria in four years, was offered vaccination, but the parents followed the advice of some opponents and refused the offer. Those who persuaded the parents to subject this child to unnecessary risks doubtless sympathize deeply with them, but this does not undo the harm done.

Those who are slow to be convinced will cite the well known fact that diphtheria runs in cycles and that there are years in which experience teaches there should be but little of the disease, irrespective of what is done to control it. The answer to that is that this low rate has prevailed for ten years, and the trend is steadily downward. Nothing like that was ever known in the years before the use of diphtheria vaccination.

New Haven is a city with beyond 170,000 population and in such a place there have always been many cases and at least a moderate number of deaths due to diphtheria each year. Furthermore, the downward trend of the disease is plainest in those states and cities where most diphtheria vaccination is done. In places where not much of it is done the disease is following about the same moderate downward trend with rhythmic ups and downs as have characterized it for the last quarter of a century.

MAYBE RINGWORM.

T. F. G. writes: Can you recommend anything for what I understand are called club nails? The nails thicken and a hard, almost calcareous, growth develops inside them, rendering the ends of the toes exceedingly sore. This makes one walk like a very old man and also renders the foot from the large joint to the tips of the toes almost useless.

I have tried sulphur ointment, peroxide of hydrogen, carbolic vaseline, talcum powder, boracic acid, zinc ointment, etc. There is a certain amount of relief from some of them, owing perhaps to the softening effects of the grease, but no cure.

REPLY:

In such cases there is some kind of a long standing disease of the nails. Ringworm is the most frequent cause.

A chiropodist would trim the nails greatly, using liquid potassa, or lye, and prolonged soaking in soap and water to soften the nail. He would then cut it down thin with a knife or polish it down with sand paper. After this had been accomplished probably application of ringworm medicines would be in order.

NEPHRITIS.

Mrs. C. N. C. writes:

1. Kindly give a discourse on nephritis and high blood pressure.

2. Also give suggestions as to the foods of a patient suffering from these diseases.

3. Can they be cured?

REPLY:

1. Nephritis and high blood pressure are generally associated. The two together are far more serious than either separately. We have a booklet on each. These sell at ten cents apiece. Send stamped self-addressed envelope with request.

2. A person with these diseases should eat an ordinary diet, but in moderation. He should avoid heavy meals and rich foods. If he diets the chances are he will restrict his diet too much.

3. Probably not. When a person has only one of these diseases, by careful living, he may last a great many years.

LOANS.

Chicago, Oct. 9.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—C had borrowed $120 from a finance company. She needed $200 more and the loan company said if she got some one to sign for her she might have it. So D signed the note, and now C says D can pay it, for she can't. 1. Can D be held responsible for the full note or just for the extra $200 that C borrowed? D is unable to meet this obligation. C also gave the loan company her life insurance policy. 2. Can D hold that until she pays him? W. B. K.

1. In general, a person signing as guarantor cannot be held unless there is consideration for the signature. This consideration ordinarily takes the form of the lender's advancing money in reliance on the signature. We cannot say whether these principles would give a defense as to the $120 without knowing more precisely how the transaction was handled.

2. Yes.

FACTS NOT CLEAR.

Chicago, Oct. 9.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A divorces B in Iowa and receives property with the exception of one place known and designated as the home place, which B is given life interest in. Later B is committed to an insane asylum and a guardian is appointed. A dies and wills property to her two granddaughters, my sister and me. We try to buy out B's interest so as to be able to sell the property. Guardian refuses a reasonable offer. Heirs let taxes lapse for two years. 1. If taxes are not paid, how long, according to Iowa law, is one allowed before foreclosure? 2. Can heirs have attorney start proceedings to force guardian to pay taxes on property or cancel his client's interest in property? 3. Is guardian allowed to cancel his client's interest in property when the court awarded client life interest? 4. If guardian refuses to pay taxes and cancels interest in property can he be made to pay attorney's fee and court costs, or are the heirs liable for same? N. M.

1. Foreclosure implies a mortgage, and you have said nothing about a mortgage. The two properties should be separated for tax purposes so that default on one would not involve tax sale on the other.

2. We do not understand how you are involved in the situation. We advise you to talk your facts over with an attorney.

3. We do not understand what you mean by canceled.

4. See preceding answer.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

OCTOBER 15, 1916.

CHICAGO. — W. P. (Red Bill) O'Brien, suspended police captain charged with responsibility for vice in the Cottage Grove avenue district, took the witness stand before Justice Harry Olson and accused Chief Charles C. Healey and the mayor's friends with direct responsibility for those same conditions. He painted himself as the "administration goat." Testifying upon State's Attorney Hoyne's application for a warrant for the chief's arrest, O'Brien sought to convey the impression that he personally had done his best to suppress these conditions, but his hands were tied. He introduced letters to indicate that he had reported rotten conditions to Chief Healey. Following O'Brien's testimony State's Attorney Hoyne indicated that he would ask warrants for the arrest of Healey; William Luthardt, secretary to the chief; George F. Harding, state senator from the First senatorial district, and Oscar De Priest, Negro alderman from the Second ward.

BERLIN.—During his visit to the eastern front last week Emperor William told the troops of Gen. von Eben that their two slogans should be, "He shall not get through" and "He must be beaten."

PARIS.—In the fighting south of the Somme river the French captured a first German line on a 2,100 yard front, east of Belloy-en-Santerre, and also the hamlet of Genermont and the sugar refinery near Ablaincourt. The advance was a part of the movement to encircle Chaulnes. Today's gains were made three miles northeast of Chaulnes and also tightened the noose around a German force that has been counter attacking desperately near Ablaincourt.

LONDON.—After a fortnight of reversals in Transylvania the Rumanian army has suddenly resumed the offensive, throwing back the Teutons at several places along the frontier. An official statement from the Rumanian war office announced the capture of two villages and a mountain peak in the Transylvanian Alps. The Austro-Germans at places have retired in disorder, it was announced at Bucharest, and only at one point are the Rumanians continuing to yield ground.

ROME.—Continuing their new Carso plateau offensive, the Italians have extended their gains on Sober ridge as far as the road from San Piedro to Predacina, it was officially announced.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—The house of deputies of the Protestant Episcopal general convention defeated the proposed canon to forbid the marriage of any persons divorced from living spouses. As a result of this action, the present law of the church, which allows the innocent party to a divorce for adultery to remarry, will stand for three years more at least.

CHEER UP.

Chicago, Oct. 11.—The editorial "Cheer Up" was first printed after the Chicago fire. Where is the resemblance to today's situation?

The invisible fire—the ruinous cost of operating our city and county—is raging more wildly than ever. Today Cook county will spend at least $750,000. If $10,000 revenue is handed in to the county treasurer he will be more surprised than I. Yet Cook county already owes approximately $750,000,000, three-quarters of a billion dollars, and every day going deeper and deeper into the hole.

At least 20,000 deadheads, useless employés in our local governments (excepting the policemen, firemen, and the teachers who teach), could be dismissed from the public pay roll tonight and that action would help to put the fire out. If the board of education will reduce its budget about 3 times the amount it has already reduced, that will help to put the fire out. If the city administration will stop drawing a herring across the trail, drop its criticism of the board of education [the city has cut its budget only 9 per cent against the board's 24 per cent] and cut 50 or 60 per cent that will help put the fire out.

Before we begin to cheer up let's put the fire out! Let's stand up and fight the fire. Most of the honest, nonpolitical citizens of Chicago are not crying so badly about what they lost or what was taken away from them so much as for the simple chance to start over.

Let's wait till the fire is over before we start to cheer up. Let's use that "I Will" spirit to end the destruction before we can ever apply it to the reconstruction. Let's call out the bucket brigade of nonpolitical Chicagoans. Let's fight first—and cheer up later.

JOHN J. MANGAN.

TAX REFORM.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—George Washington made the following statement: "It is not a custom with me to keep money to look at." He invested his money in property, tools, real estate, housing, slaves, merchandise, food, cattle, etc. But in his day there was no personal property tax, no real estate tax, no grafting politicians. An individual today must continuously earn more and more, work harder and harder, to keep in possession of his property, whatever it may be composed of. If he cannot produce he loses all.

Therefore, the only sane thing for him to do is to purchase nothing above bare necessities and hoard his money secretly. Hence bad business condition. The persons who spend money for nonessentials today are considered careless. Those who buy taxable goods, bonds, stocks, and real estate are considered as lunatics.

The only possible remedy for this situation is a tax on production—i. e., a small sales tax on all nonessentials, a small income tax, a small excess profit tax, and no tax exempt securities. Nonessentials are to be defined as articles not necessary to a comfortable life such as plain food, moderately priced clothing, plain furniture, and a nonpretentious home.

MILTON ROSENBLUM.

AN INCIDENT INVOLVING MRS. B.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—While driving near Palos last Sunday with Mrs. B. riding in the rear seat, the window being partly open, in sailed a perfectly good U. S. penny and hit her arm with considerable force. Now what I want to know is how in tophet that coin was thrown into the car. The front and rear fenders cover the wheels in such manner it would seem impossible that a wheel could have picked the penny up and hurled it into the car. However, I am convinced that when good coin of the realm comes tumbling into cars along the highway Old Man Depression is on the toboggan. What do you opine?

H. N. BARRELL.

A LADY INSULTED.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—I should like to give voice to an incident that was both embarrassing and most insulting.

Standing on the corner of 730 North Michigan waiting for a No. 52 bus last Saturday afternoon numerous buses passed me but none of them a No. 52. When one finally came it was so crowded that I did not signal it as I wished to rest on the way home. I was tired and impatient and had been there for quite a while when the traffic officer on that corner came up to me and very insinuatingly said "Pardon me, miss, but are you waiting for a bus or perhaps you're waiting for the type of bus that doesn't come."

I was flabbergasted and asked him if he was trying to be insulting. Well—he thought I had been there quite a while and—

To be so grossly insinuating is, in my opinion, entirely uncalled for, and if it has reached the point where one cannot stand on a corner and wait for a bus without being insulted by—of all people—an officer, it is a sad condition indeed! Too, had he used the smallest amount of judgment he would have realized that, had I wanted a pickup I most certainly would not have been there that long. I am still fuming and to help matters there were several people there also.

L. LEIGHTON.

DR. EINSTEIN'S FAME.

Berwyn, Ill., Oct. 11.—In your paper of today Prof. Albert Einstein is referred to as the discoverer of the theory of relativity. This seems to be a generally understood opinion, which I believe is erroneous. Prof. Hendrik Antoon Lorentz [1853-1928], famous Dutch physicist, after a brilliant career as a mathematician, in 1903 formulated the so called "Lorentz' transformation," which formed the basis of the restricted theory of relativity.

He propounded his discoveries in several lectures at the foremost universities of the United States.

A very modest, retiring character, Prof. Lorentz attracted little attention among the laymen, in contrast with his eminent colleague, Prof. Einstein, whose aversion to publicity is not as discernible. This proves that even in the realm of science it pays to advertise.

SOME QUESTIONS.

Decatur, Ill., Oct. 3.—I must write to you complimenting you upon your "Platform for America." Why not induce congress to enact it?

I am a Hoover Republican, but absolutely not a Stimson Republican. Is it possible to have one without the other?

Will you please find out for this undecided voter just how Franklin D. Roosevelt stands on the Manchurian [Manchukuo] question? It is of much importance to me.

Your editorial on "Texas and Manchukuo," in last week's paper is what we need. Why blame Japan for doing what every nation in the world has done—or will do in the future? Let us take Washington's advice and keep out of all foreign entanglements. It is possible.

TROUBLE IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Chicago, Oct. 11.—I notice where twelve members of the Filipino constabulary, together with a number of their opponents, were slain in a battle with the Moros of the southern part of the islands. Has it ever occurred to the powers that be at Washington and Manila that perhaps the Mohammedan Moros resent the overlordship of the Filipino officials who govern them even more than the latter dislike the mild form of supervision exercised by the United States?

If necessary two separate departments should be created in the islands, one for the Filipinos in the north, the other for the Moros in the south.

POSTAL HEARING ADJOURNS UNTIL AFTER ELECTION

Discuss Many Subjects on Final Day.

Testimony given yesterday at the congressional committee's postoffice hearing in a city hall coutroom covered a multitude of subjects. Loss of business due to the 3 cent stamp, relief and free flour for substitute carriers and clerks, the several sites proposed for the new Chicago postoffice building, air rights, architects' fees, preference of metal over wood for interior finishings, and losses through buying heat and power instead of producing them were discussed. Then the committee, headed by Congressman James Mead [Dem., N. Y.] adjourned the inquiry until after election.

C. P. SCHEEL.

C. P. Scheel, assistant postmaster in the Chicago office, was the last witness at the hearing. He said that the revenues of the Chicago postoffice for September, 1932 were 6 per cent under those of September, 1931. In August the loss was 6½ per cent, and in July the 15 per cent compared with same months in 1931. This interested Congressman Clyde Kelly [Rep. Pa.] who said congress had hoped to increase revenue $139,000,000 by raising postage rates from 2 cents to 3 cents.

Rate Raise Halted Losses.

Mr. Scheel explained that the loss would have been far more if it had not been for the rate increase which became effective July 6. Before that, income had dropped 20 to 30 per cent under corresponding months of 1931. Congressman Kelly said that inasmuch as the expected return from the new rate was based on the belief there would be as much business in 1932 as in 1931, congress is going to be badly disappointed.

Congressman Adolph J. Sabath [Dem., Ill.], the Chicago membeg of the committee, said his colleagues believe that a return to the 2 cent postage rate is advisable because many firms that formerly used the mails now employ cheaper methods of delivering printed material. Mr. Scheel's comment was that the 3 cent rate undoubtedly has increased the revenue.

Lueder a Witness.

Postmaster Arthur C. Lueder was a witness. He said he had little to do with selecting the sites for the new postoffice, the Marshall Field site, and the present location near the Union station. He is not the custodian of the federal building, he said, and could give no information about the recent cleaning of the building which was stopped when half finished.

The congressmen then questioned him about working conditions. He said the average wage of sub carriers and clerks is $50 a month. None of them are starving, he said, as the working employes contribute to a fund to help the part time workers.

Dr. Wilson Compton of Washington and John Westrum of Minneapolis, representing the lumber industry, presented their complaints to the committee. Specifications for new postoffices always call for metal finishing instead of wood, they said, although metal costs twice as much. The architects, being paid on the basis of 4.8 per cent of total costs, always insist on the more expensive finishings, the witnesses both said.

C. M. Garland, consulting engineer, said he had tried to induce the government to install its own heating and power plants at the new postoffice. Instead, the witness said, the government has probably given the Union station a contract to furnish heat for the postoffice, while the Commonwealth Edison company will furnish the electricity.

"I estimated that the government will lose $191,000 a year through refusing to install its own plants," Mr. Garland said.

The morning session dealt with rumors that the $13,000,000 contract for the new postoffice was awarded through favoritism. This was not proved and competing firms denied having said it was so. It developed, however, that the contractor had to give a bond which cost him $16 per $1,000 on a $7,000,000 bond, the rate being fixed by the Towner Rating bureau of New York. The contractor figures that cost in making his bid, it was said.

It was while talking about the contract that Chairman Mead said it was important that James Simpson be called as a witness. He was told Simpson is in New York.

"If he is the same Simpson who is connected with the Marshall Field site, who is also a railroad director, and is now an Insull utility official, his testimony is most important," Representative Mead said.

"Mr. Simpson has a splendid reputation here," Representative Sabath replied. "He was connected with Marshall Field & Co. and he is now in charge of the former Insull utilities. He always represents his company to the best of his ability and with good conscience."

"This is no reflection on Mr. Simpson," Chairman Mead said, "but inasmuch as he was interested in the first site, and the second site is over a railroad, and he is a railroad director, and he is now interested in selling light and power, he will be a most interesting witness. We'll postpone this hearing until after election and then we'll call him."

Arrest Traffic Violator; Find He's a Bank Robber

Joseph Bates, 33 years old, 155 West Grand avenue, was arrested Wednesday for driving through a red traffic light. Then police found a revolver in his automobile. Yesterday, as Capt. Luke Garrick of the Deering police prepared to show him to robbery victims, he confessed robbing the Fillmore State Bank of Fillmore, Mo., on Nov. 6, 1931, in which $750 was taken, and the Farmer City National bank, Farmer City, Ill., on Dec. 2, 1931, which yielded $4,100.

Robber Shoots a Woman in Auto, Then Escapes

A bandit jumped on the running board of an automobile at Ashland avenue and Blackhawk street last night and prodded Mrs. Catherine Lupus, 50 years old, 1713 West Adams street, with a revolver. Mrs. Lupus grabbed the gun and the bandit shot her in the arm, then jumped off the running board and fled. Harry Cleary, Mrs. Lupus's nephew, who was driving the car, took her to St. Mary's hospital, where her injuries were said not to be serious.

Tribune Tower
Chicago, Illinois.
Gentlemen:
The rise of Hills Bros. Coffee in Chicago, from nothing to first place in eleven months, is substantial proof of the dominating influence of the Chicago Tribune for a product that lives up to every claim of its advertising.
Preliminary to our entry into your City, a research was made which took into consideration every detail of the Chicago market. The results that we have obtained, as checked by these field investigations, show clearly that we have been well advised in using the Tribune for our major advertising effort.
Each successive month's sales have been in excess of the original estimate, and even a disinterested observer would be certain to credit a large share of this remarkable result to the forcefulness of the Tribune. The color pages that appear regularly in the Sunday Rotogravure Section are reproductions so beautiful and so dramatic that we feel they mark a new era in coffee advertising.
Our success in using the Chicago Tribune is a perfect example of the power of well-planned newspaper advertising to win a major market in record time.

Unknown in the great Chicago market in 1930. Entering the lists against 56 other brands of coffee already used by Chicago families. But passing all except two of them in the next five months and actually capturing first place in eleven months.

Success was practically assured from the start because the entire campaign was planned on the revealed facts of the Chicago situation. They knew the market and they knew how to reach it.

In 1930, over 71% of the total Chicago newspaper appropriation was expended in the Chicago Tribune. The results were so prompt and definite that 77% of the 1931 Chicago newspaper appropriation was used in the Tribune. This year, smashing color pages in the Tribune have again pushed the sales figures to new high ground.

It is just this kind of clear-cut results which make it plain that "if you are not in the Tribune, you are not in Chicago."

For here is a campaign that quickly reached every objective, despite the depression and its consequent offerings of cheap coffees, successfully competing on a strictly quality basis.

It takes a great newspaper to do a job like this . . . great not only in size and influence, but equally powerful in direct merchandising ability.

The Chicago Tribune record of successes is the kind of current sales history that means something today. By all means, have it before you now. A letter or wire will bring the entire fact-picture of the Chicago market to your desk.

WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

Spending Is Attacked on Two Fronts Here.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

High taxation and extravagant governmental expenditures were attacked on two fronts here yesterday.

For the state, some 450 tax spending and levying officials, members of chambers of commerce, editors and leaders in the fight on excessive taxation discussed what the 102 counties are doing to relieve the burden on the taxpayers and stressed the necessity for continued effort to reduce taxes. This meeting was held as a part of the annual convention of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce in the Hotel La Salle.

Demand Cut in All Costs.

For the nation, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, chairman of the National Economy league, made public a letter signed by former President Coolidge, Alfred E. Smith, Elihu Root, Gen. Pershing, Newton D. Baker, and Admiral Sims, in which the warning was made that "the general public will find itself in a condition of servitude unless all government costs are reduced."

Walter W. Williams, president of the Illinois chamber, and C. M. Thompson of the University of Illinois, chairman of the chamber's taxation committee, discussed the Illinois tax situation. Mr. Thompson submitted a report detailing what the counties are doing to relieve the tax problem.

Most of those attending were from downstate and there was a representative from every important city in Illinois except Cairo. Mayor Homer L. Ahrens of Peoria, headed a delegation of 17. J. H. Hallstrom of Rockford headed another delegation. Others at the meeting included Edward J. Barrett, state treasurer; W. A. Hennessy, mayor of Joliet; C. W. Terry, Edwardsville; Frank Appleton, Litchfield; Samual Bradt, De Kalb; Wayne Hummer, La Salle; W. A. Krause and P. W. Wright, Champaign; H. N. Yates, Aurora; D. Twomey, Matoon, and H. W. Wright, East St. Louis.

Burden Exceeds Capacity to Pay.

Opening the meeting, Mr. Williams declared "incomes from salaries and wages have either been cut or have disappeared. As a result it is necessary that we revise and balance our governmental budgets—the thousands out of work have nothing to balance. Corporations and individuals have been reducing their expenditures because they had to.

"Through the years of plenty we developed policies regarding expenditures. These were well enough so long as conditions were prosperous. We paid our taxes, grumbling sometimes, but we paid them. But now we can no longer pay.

"On every side citizens are asking that ways be found to reduce expenditures. We not only should but must reduce the cost of government. This does not mean that we must impair the necessary functions of government, but we should cut out overlapping functions.

Aroused Public Needed.

"We must provide with taxpayers' money only those things absolutely necessary. We cannot go to Washington and cry for reductions when the bulk of our expenditures are in our local communities. When the public has been aroused our representatives in Washington and Springfield will catch the spirit and follow suit.

"If members of tax spending bodies are indifferent, or worse, it is the citizens' fault. They have permitted this situation to exist and to grow. Recovery from our present plight is bound up with the problem of getting back to sanity in the spending of the public's money."

Mr. Thompson reviewed the entry of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce three years ago into the campaign for sanity in taxation and governmental expenditures. He said that there are 16,000 tax spending bodies in the state, the members of which are all elected by the people. Consequently it is up to the electorate to see that their will is carried out.

Promises Saving for State.

Mr. Thompson gave one ray of hope for the taxpayers when he remarked that the bill for local government in Illinois for next year will be somewhere between 10 and 20 million dollars less than it has been.

"One reason public expenditures are so heavy," he said "is that every single expenditure has some honest friends. In my visit to the state legislature I never saw any groups trying to get reduced taxes, they were usually trying to get appropriations. Washington is filled with buildings bearing fancy brass plates on which are engraved the 'society for the propagation or prevention of something.' Every one of these groups is looking for appropriations from the national government.

"I went to a tax meeting in an Illinois city where citizens wanted their rates cut. Near the close of the meeting a meek man at the rear got up and asked for a bond issue for the library. It was passed. This is the sort of tax straw which is now breaking the citizens' backs. The trouble is they no longer are tax straws—they are bales of straw."

Urges Watching Officials.

Following Mr. Thompson's talk, representatives of various communities told of their experiences. There was P. W. Wright of Champaign, holder of a number of offices, including president of the local sanitary board. "We are tax unconscious," Mr. Wright asserted. "Every citizen must watch how his officers are spending his money."

Mr. Wright said a tax committee in his city had an analysis made of the expenditures of every public organization. As a result of this it has been possible to reduce taxes considerably. The sanitary board has cut its budget 17 per cent and is operating at a cost of 57 per cent under the legal limit of its levy. It has no anticipation warrants outstanding and it has enough funds to carry on through the fiscal year. The analysis also listed other economies in the local government.

Schools Reduce Costs.

W. A. Krause told of the efforts in Kankakee county for economy. He asserted jobs have been reduced 10 per cent by the county and that salaries for both the city and county have been lowered. A finance committee scrutinizes every expenditure. He said that although attendance in the schools has increased considerably, the board of education has cut its costs 20 per cent in the last three years.

H. N. Yates of Aurora told how Kane county and the Fox river valley cities have been working for economy. One instance was of particular interest. The government is building a postoffice in Aurora. Because of conditions it was found that the building would cost $100,000 less to erect than expected. Thereupon certain groups in the city demanded that frills be included to bring the cost up to the allotted amount. The chamber of commerce was able to block this and to secure a statement from the secretary of the treasury that the saving would be passed on to the taxpayers.

Seek 22 Per Cent Cost Cut.

D. Twomey of Mattoon said Coles county hopes to save 22 per cent in the expenses of all departments of the county. The chamber of commerce is preparing for tax levying time next April. Wallace Wright of East St. Louis told of the experience of his city where the taxpayers were saved $250,000 last year and it is expected this amount will be greater this year.

Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, addressed the annual banquet of the state chamber last night. Mr. Knox warned that the country "is headed toward communism unless an aroused, intelligent, and militant public opinion forces the federal government out of private fields."

The letter from the National Economy league committee received by Admiral Byrd said:

"In the two decades we have seen the cost of government rise from about 3 billion dollars to about 14 billion dollars. This was too much when taxes were moderately easy to pay. It is a crushing burden under present business conditions.

"We believe that these public expenditures should be reduced all along the line. Every unnecessary action of the government should be abolished. High salaries should be reduced. The people should be permitted to spend more of their earnings on themselves and required to spend less on the tax collector.

For Pay Without Wasting.

"We must discharge our obligations to the veterans and their dependents. But we should waste no money and tolerate no extravagance under the claim of performing any of these necessary functions.

"All the costs of local, state, and national government must be reduced without fear and without favor. Unless the people, through unified action, arise and take charge of their government they will find that their government has taken charge of them. Independence and liberty will be gone and the general public will find itself in a condition of servitude to an aggregation of organized and selfish minorities.

"When that day comes our political and economic system will neither merit nor command the respect and support of the people and universal bankruptcy and anarchy will prevail. If we are to be saved from that catastrophe we must join in organized service, organized sacrifice, and organized patriotism."

Byrd at Women's Meeting.

An audience heralded as feminine but which turned out to be surprisingly mixed, taxed the capacity of the Drake hotel ballroom last night to hear Rear Admiral Byrd's reiteration of his attack on the tax evil. Bursts of applause at frequent intervals testified to the popularity of his stinging indictments of "the organized minorities" which he charged with responsibility for this country's plight. Several local women's clubs sponsored the meeting. "Through the National Economy league," Admiral Byrd said last night, the 'unorganized majority' of the country's voters are offered a bulwark of strength to impose their will upon the lawmakers and force a reduction in taxes.

"It is our aim," he added, "to secure a reduction of about 25 per cent in the taxes. That would amount to more than four billion dollars." He was halted there by the storm of handclapping.

SPAIN TO FORCE CHURCH TO HAND OVER PROPERTY

MADRID, Oct. 14.—(AP)—A law requiring the Catholic church in Spain to give up to the state all its cathedrals, churches, and extensive lands in accordance with the religious articles of the new constitution was formally recorded and assured of passage in the national assembly today.

The law demanded for the state all the church's jewels and objects of art, among which are some of the most famous in the world, and declared that the church must henceforth pay for the maintenance of its places of worship.

The measure laid down that the "privileges hitherto enjoyed by the church" must be liquidated and that the time has come for the church to possess only such goods and property as it may acquire in common rights with others.

All religious worship, the law stipulated, must be conducted by the church within its own doors except by special permit. The projected measure called for registration of all religious orders, with the names of their officers and a list of their property.

GERMANS REJECT GENEVA AS SITE FOR ARMS PARLEY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 14.—Germany is willing to attend a four power conference on disarmament, but not in Geneva, Foreign Minister Baron Konstantin von Neurath told the British charge d'affaires who extended the British invitation today. The Germans contend that the atmosphere of Geneva, where the first disarmament conference failed, would prove detrimental to Germany's claim for equality in armaments.

If the powers pledge to grant Germany equality before the conference, the Germans are willing to drop their objections to Geneva as the scene of the meeting, the foreign minister announced.

German Distrust Increases.

Germany's distrust of Geneva was increased today when it was reported that Rene Massigli of France, a member of the preparatory disarmament commission, was greeted warmly by Geneva politicians after a speech in which he charged that German police are receiving military training.

"The Massigli speech is proof of the hatred of Germany that is felt and expressed by politicians in Geneva, and it shows again that nothing good can come to Germany from the vitiated atmosphere of the capital of the league of nations," it was declared in circles close to the government tonight.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—The two power conference as to whether a four power conference should be called to decide whether the general disarmament conference shall be resumed was completed in London today.

Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain and Premier Herriot of France, who constituted the two power conference, agreed that it would be desirable to hold a four power conference at Geneva in the near future to find a way of getting Germany back into the international disarmament conference. But so far nothing seems to have moved much, for, while Italy has signified its agreement to a four power meeting, Germany is still balking at the idea of holding such a conference at Geneva, where she suspects that the atmosphere is too French for her to get in a square deal in her demand for arms equality.

The selection of Geneva was a move won by Herriot because MacDonald's original proposal, which had the assent of the Germans, was to hold the four power meeting in London. The French objected because they said they would not have free communication with their continental allies.

HITLER TROOPER SLAIN; POLITICAL ARMIES CLASH

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 14.—Germany's election campaign fever is commencing to spread. In Braunschweig [Brunswick], Wilhelm Kampe, a Hitler shock trooper, was murdered today. His body, riddled with bullets, was flung from an automobile. He is believed to have been killed by comrades who had accused him of betraying them.

In Hamburg Hitlerites stabbed the local Steel Helmet chief and his assistant. Both were seriously wounded. Great efforts are being made to keep details of the political crashes secret.

Former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm is taking a strenuous hand in the campaign which reaches its climax at the reichstag election on Nov. 6. The National Socialist leader, Von Ostau, had appealed to Adolf Hitler, in an open letter, to end his feud with Chancellor Franz von Papen and the Steel Helmets.

Urges United Stand.

The former crown prince wrote to Von Ostau bemoaning the fact that "comrades of the Steel Helmet, storm troops and shock troops, the real representatives of Germany's youth, ready to defend the country, should be struggling against each other to the joy of envious enemies in foreign countries and the 'red front' in Germany."

"May your letter help to bring together the men who place the fatherland higher than their own interests; may they again as in the days of 1914-18 unite in comradeship and form a united front against everything that is unworthy of Germans," he concluded.

The fact that the previous government of Prussia—Socialists and Catholic Centrists—possessed secret funds of $1,250,000 which they used at election times is being used by the Nationalists in their campaign. They are trying to convince German voters that their opponents are grafters. Discovery of the secret funds induced a committee of the Prussian diet to demand the arrest of Otto Klepper, former Prussian finance minister, to answer to the committee for the period when he was president of Prussia's official bank.

Warns Against Food Restrictions.

Meanwhile Dr. Hans Luther, president of the Reichsbank, today formally warned the government not to restrict the importation of foreign foodstuffs. He warned that "restrictions would endanger exports and thus peril German currency." The cabinet today discussed its economic program and business men expressed the hope that Dr. Luther's warning will influence the government to drop its policy of restricting imports.

BRITISH RECTOR KICKED; KICKER FINED IN COURT

LONDON, Oct. 14.—The Rev. Harold F. Davidson, rector of Stiffkey, has been severely kicked, and apparently in a tender place, for it has troubled him for several days.

This fact was revealed today when the Rev. Mr. Davidson had Maj. Philip Hammond, retired, an army officer at Holt, Norfolk, in court on charges of assault. The rector testified that after his farewell service at Stiffkey on Aug. 21, he called on Maj. Hammond at his house. The major came to the door and the rector smiled pleasantly, he continued, and said that he wanted to discuss a certain matter connected with the parish.

The major, the rector declared, assumed a menacing attitude and said, "Get out, you." The rector turned and the major kicked him. Moreover, as he was leaving, the major also kicked the rector's companion, an author and organist, who has also brought action against the major.

The court found Maj. Hammond guilty and fined him $5 in each case and $30 costs.

Florida Prosecutor Alleges Cruelty.

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 14.—(AP)—Samuel B. Wilson, assistant state's attorney, told a jury today its duty is to give George Courson and Solomon Higginbotham the same death penalty the former prison guards inflicted by torture on young Arthur Maillefert. Defense counsel argued the men's only offenses were minor infractions of prison rules.

The death verdict, said Wilson, would be just judgment not only on the death of the prisoner strangled in a sweat box at Sunbeam prison camp, but on the "hellish convict system of Florida as well."

He demanded a verdict of guilty without the mercy recommendation that would allow for a life sentence, asserting the defense contention that the Westfield, N. J., youth deliberately hanged himself was disposed of by physicians' testimony describing self-strangulation as impossible for a man who has use of his hands.

Wilson, jangling the chain on which Maillefert was found hanging, called the death "Florida's infamous chain gang hanging."

Maillefert, serving nine years for a filling station robbery at Daytona Beach, was found dead in the little punishment cell last June 3, hanging on a chain locked around his neck, tied to a rafter. His feet were bound in stocks.

JAPANESE WARN ALIENS TO FLEE BATTLE DISTRICT

MUKDEN, Manchuria, Oct. 14.—(AP)—Japanese headquarters here announced today that airplanes had dropped leaflets printed in English over a number of points in the area west of Mukden, where an offensive against Chinese insurgents is under way, warning all foreigners to withdraw or concentrate in one city.

It was estimated that the area contains twenty foreigners, including eight American Catholic missionaries from the Maryknoll mission headquarters at Ossining, N. Y. Most of these were believed to be at Fushun, inside the Japanese lines and out of danger.

The Japanese announced that they already have captured half of the Tungpien bandit zone, which covers 20,000 square miles. The Japanese said the Chinese dead were so numerous that they could not count the bodies. Prisoners are executed where they are taken.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 14.—[Special.]—Miss Annie Teller, 92, a descendant of John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States, died today in a tiny hall bedroom in 32d street. She was overcome by gas that seeped from a break in a rubber hose attached to a heater.

An old love story brought out one of the reasons for her refusal to live with her kindred. For more than seventy years she had resided with strangers. During the last twenty years her neighbors were the poor of the east side tenement district.

Romance Is Told.

It was said Miss Teller, in her girlhood, had rejected a proposal of marriage, realized her mistake, and that lived in her memory through the long years.

In her hall bedroom, where she lived two years, were a bank book showing a deposit of several hundred dollars in the Dobbs Ferry bank, three gold rings and one of silver, and a single cuff link, apparently a man's. It is old gold, worn down to paper thinness, as if from constant handling.

John Connors, one of the neighbor's sons, discovered the body and spread the news, "Mother's dead"—they all called her mother. The neighbors clustered around the door of her room.

Born in 1840.

Annie Teller was born Aug. 18, 1840, in Putnam valley, Putnam county. Her father was Elisha Teller, who, according to family legend, was on the frigate Constitution—Old Ironsides—with his brother, Pierre, at the bombardment of Tripoli in the war against the Barbary states in 1805. Her mother was Betsy Ann Adams Teller, daughter of Asa Adams, a direct descendant of the President.

In the old fashioned trunk in the little hall bedroom the police found two certificates that set forth the qualifications of Annie Teller to teach the second grade of common school. They were dated 1866 and 1863. Apparently she had treasured them. They had cracked from too much handling, but she had stitched them together with white thread.

Recalls Her as Restless.

Mrs. Joseph Nickerson of Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., wife of Miss Teller's nephew, said tonight that Miss Teller taught school for many years. Mrs. Nickerson and Mrs. Hana D. A. Barrett, another relative, recalled Miss Teller as an "independent, restless soul," who disliked remaining too long in any one spot. For that reason she shifted from one school district to another. Miss Barrett told of Miss Teller's romance.

She refused to live with her Westchester relatives or with a sister who had a home in Toledo. She preferred to mingle with the poor folk of the east side. The policemen on 3d avenue knew her. Sometimes she would drop in at the East 35th street police station for a friendly chat and she never tired of telling the neighbors of the days when she was a "schoolmarm."

SENTENCED FOR CHURCH ROBBERY.

Robert Thorne, 4623 West Chicago avenue, and Joseph Harper, 2309 West Monroe street were sentenced to six months in the house of correction yesterday by Judge Freeman L. Fairbank for trying to break into the safe in St. Philomena's church, Kedvale avenue and Cortland street.

INDICT BROTHER FOR KILLING OHIO YOUTH AND GIRL

Lima, O., Oct. 14.—(AP)—Loren Truesdale, 23, was indicted late today on a first degree murder charge for the deaths of his brother, Earl, 20, and Miss Thelma Woods, 19, whose bodies were found in a water filled quarry here more than 16 months ago.

Loren was arrested on Sept. 1 when police quoted him as saying he killed his brother because he was "always taking my girls from me." Miss Woods was slain, according to the purported confession, because Loren was afraid she would talk.

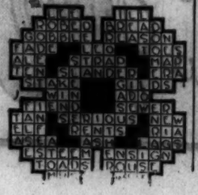
YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE SOLVED



FRESH AIR MADE AID TO INDUSTRY AND HEALTH, TOO

Pills and Textiles Both Helped by It.

New York, Oct. 14.—(AP)—Perpetual winter for pink pills and perpetual summer for common colds both were claimed as achievements of the new air conditioning industry here tonight.

The two illustrated the broad scope of air conditioning uses, as described by several speakers at a symposium of the New York section of the American Chemical society.

Solving the pill making weather puzzle was explained by William A. Hanley of Indianapolis. Formerly he said in summer it was impossible to equally impossible to manufacture coat pills with the pinks, chocolates, and whites used in medicine. It was gelatine capsules, to bottle fizz tablets, or to finish off expensive "gland" products.

These all needed cold, dry days; heat and humidity ruined them. Expensive machinery was idle for months and many men jobless as a result. But with air conditioning all these departments can work every day in the year.

How New England weather has been taken south by air conditioning into textile mills built close to cotton fields was told by S. B. Lincoln.

"Winter colds," he said, "are largely attributed to the drying of mucous membrance of the throat. It seems to be the rather unanimous opinion of physicians that by humidifying the air in winter and thus avoiding irritating the mucous membranes by supplying properly conditioned air in place of the present dry harsh air now so prevalent in our heating systems, so-called winter colds will be very materially reduced."

ONE OF LEGION'S FOUNDERS HURT IN CRASH; DIES

Warren, O., Oct. 15 [Saturday].—(AP)—Col. Ralph Cole, one of the founders of the American Legion, its state commander, and formerly a member of congress, died in Warren city hospital early today from injuries suffered Tuesday in an automobile accident.

The colonel, who helped found the Legion in Paris, France, at the close of the world war, was known by thousands of veterans throughout the United States.

Col. Cole suffered a fractured vertebra of the neck, which caused paralysis of the lower portion of his body, when his automobile overturned near Parkman while he and James V. Suhr of Cleveland were returning from a Legion meeting at Warren. Suhr was only slightly injured.

Mrs. Cole and their son, Ralph Jr., were with the colonel when he died.

MAKER OF STAGE STARS IS DEAD OF HEART ATTACK

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 14.—(AP)—Miss Jessie Bonstelle, "maker of stars," whose name for 20 years shone in electric lights as a Detroit theater director and owner, died today in the midst of a fight to keep intact her Civic theater, one of the few similar enterprises in the country. She was born near Greece, N. Y., but her age was a matter of speculation.

A heart attack induced by a cold brought death to the former actress, who, during her years of theatrical activity in Detroit, developed such stage and screen stars as Ann Harding, Katherine Cornell, Ben Lyon, Melvyn Douglas, Frank Morgan, Jessie Royce Landis, and Minor Watson.

Among Miss Bonstelle's first successes as a producer was "Little Women," the childhood classic of Louisa May Alcott, which she presented in the United States and England.

In 1910, after successful appearances on the New York stage and management of stock companies in Toronto, Buffalo, and Rochester, N. Y., she came to Detroit, leased the old Garrick theater, and opened a stock engagement which lasted 14 years. Then she purchased her own theater, the Bonstelle playhouse, and two years ago organized the Detroit Civic theater.

URSULA PARROTT, NOVEL WRITER, WINS DIVORCE

Charged Banker with Cruelty.

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 14.—(AP)—Ursula Parrott became an "ex-wife"—the title of her first successful novel—for the second time today.

She won a divorce on charges of intolerable cruelty on the first anniversary of her marriage to Charles T. Greenwood, New York banker. She asked no alimony.

Miss Parrott, seen frequently at literary teas in dusky red ensembles, was given permission to discard the name Greenwood and to have custody of her 8 year old son by her first marriage to Lindesay Parrott, New York newspaper man.

The novelist said in private testimony before a referee that she and Greenwood began quarreling the day after they were wed.

Greenwood insisted, she testified, on rearing her son as he "saw fit" and objected to her sister, Miss Lucy Towle, living with them to care for the boy. She said she refused to let her sister leave their home in Wilton, Connecticut.

So heated became their arguments, she said, that they separated six weeks after their marriage. Both suffered nervous breakdowns, she testified, and on a physician's advice she went to the West Indies for a rest.

When the novelist, a native of Boston and a former Radcliffe college student, married Greenwood last Oct. 14, she gave her age as 30 and his as 41. She had divorced Parrott in January, 1928.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Katherine Plunket, oldest subject in the British isles, died today at her home, Hallymascanlan house, County Louth, Ireland, at the age of 111. Had she lived until Nov. 22, she would have been 112.

Big Safety Pins Get New Place in Style World

Five Inch Models Appear on Fashionables.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

NOT so long ago Christopher Morley wrote wittily and pungently about the ordinary domesticated safety pin in a very amusing and illuminating dissertation listing and glorifying its importance to the human race.

And now some brilliant creator with proper respect for this sort of a pin has magnified its importance and incidentally its size and utility with five inch new modernized models to be used to keep the modern clothes bound together.

Safety pins used to be frowned upon among the best dressed and fastidious folk as being slovenly bad taste and as an implement for extremely lazy people only. When you used them years ago it was merely a temporary filling, so to speak, a pin to safely anchor clothes until buttons and hooks and eyes could be reinstated, but now you boldly and brazenly stake them out in the center of your chest without blushing.

These whoppers of 1932 ancestry are of chromium; they are simple, stark, utilitarian in structure, adornment and framework . . . they are frankly and openly just a safety pin that looks exactly like huge, brassy, horse blanket pins.

You wear them with all the dash and swagger imaginable to secure the ends of your Ascot scarfs, to keep in place the fuzzy folds of swanky Angora sports frocks, and you pin them through the rough tweeds and wools of your street and sports suits and coats.

They are the smartest, newest, and most unusual things you can pin with and the quicker you buy them and use them the better.

Some other pin ideas that are much bigger and better than you might imagine are the bowknot silver and gold metal brooches. You can get them in several sizes, a modest three inch length and the much larger model that aspires to the effective five inch size with definite distinction.

You'll go around in circles this year, not in confusion, but with breast pins of silver, gold metal, and copper. Some have three intertwined circles, some have two small circles overlapping a huge center circle, and still others feature five small circles in a straight line. These rounded affairs are tremendously chic on sweaters, wool blouses, and, of course, all your knit sports frocks.

Some shrewd person has finally discovered how to use an excess supply of neglected shoe strings. A knowing clothes hound no longer gasps at unusual costume jewelry after this season, for there are no surprises or shocks left. Everything is used—witness this shoe string jewelry of bowknot necklace and matching bowknot clip, likewise starting out on a shoe string . . . but what gay dressed up strings! You will see them sparkling with ends and metal trimmings of silver and gold, glittering feminine costume accents just unpacked and modestly priced for immediate purchase, the newest and smartest costume jewelry designs that have ever been welcomed by jaded shoppers.

Secretary Wilbur Guest of President H. W. Chase

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—The University of Illinois is known throughout the world not only as a seat of culture and learning, but as a center of research work which has given great contributions to the industries and to agriculture, Ray Lyman Wilbur, secretary of the interior, said here today. He was the luncheon guest of President Harry Woodburn Chase.

Less Home Work for Child Makes for Efficiency

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

If you're a business man or woman and you work nights for months at a time you expect yourself to go stale. You can't work so well, you can't be so fresh as if you had plenty of sleep, and fresh air and recreation.

In certain manufacturing plants plans were put into effect to reduce the length of the working day. More work was accomplished in the shorter time.

Facts like these should be borne in mind when the question of children's home work is under consideration. Yesterday [Sunday] we talked only about the disadvantages of excessive home work, as far as health and happiness and rounded living were concerned. But there is another side to the matter, which is that children will work better and be fresher and more receptive when actual teaching is going on if they are not overloaded with homework. Some schools have tested this theory and found it does work that way.

Hours of home study may pack a larger number of facts—often jumbled—into children's heads. But it will be a sort of "lip service" to book l'arning—not an intelligent education. Certainly brain fagging study at night does not make for alertness and the zest of accomplishment in the daytime during school hours. Nor does it set up a real thirst for knowledge.

I know of one school in particular where no homework is given until next to the last year in grammar school. But the children are graduated so that they not only hold their own in high school, but take hold of the new work in every high and prep school they go to with great independence and ability. They have learned not a mass of facts, but how to study and work.

Less home work often means higher efficiency and greater accomplishment.

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

Mrs. Tracy's little boy Lee can have my vote!

After witnessing his ingratiating performances in "The Night Mayor" and "Washington Merry Go Round"—tell you about the latter a week from Sunday, the gods being willing—he'd suit me as President or Vice President and I'd ballyhoo for him as governor, mayor, congressman, sanitary inspector, or what have you, of Illinois.

In "The Night Mayor" he's a mayor; in "Washington Merry Go Round" a congressman. And with what zest and composure he does prance about in the honorable boots of both offices!

Now, there's no question but that "The Night Mayor" was made with all kind thoughts and best wishes directed toward former Mayor Jimmie Walker. Mr. Tracy, who, in the rôle, surprisingly resembles the dapper James, is seen as Bobby Kingston, young, popular, sartorially perfect mayor of a Big Town.

Kingston is an able, shrewd, thoroughgoing public servant—and a confirmed playboy. His two great weaknesses are waistcoats and women, and he is forever haunting gay revues and becoming lightly infatuated with show girls.

But there comes a time when Mayor Bobby is really and honestly bowled over—by a Follies girl who's next door to engaged to a newspaper reporter. I ask you—is that a situation?

Uplift leagues and investigating committees get busy with Bobby's past, present, and future. His trusty lieutenants do double handsprings trying to keep their irregardless charge out of trouble. But his honor, blithely conscious of his civic purity, persists in living his private life as he very well pleases. See pix for outcome. That varied vicissitudes roll off this public executive like raindrops from the proverbial duck, is proved by the finale. Here you discover Mayor Bobby—unlike former Mayor Jimmie—still at the head of city affairs. There he is, just a rose of fashion, leading a parade, with crowds clapping from the sidewalks and damsels cooing "Hello, Bobby!" from balconies and skyscraper windows.

Chief feminine support is rendered charmingly by Evalyn Knapp, who proves that Follies girls are noble. Donald Dilloway makes a nice, pouty newspaper lad, Eugene Pallette and Warren Hymer are elegant as chief lieutenant and bouncer to hizzoner the mayor. Direction was snappy.

Nice, fast, catchy little picture, "The Night Mayor," with Lee Tracy doing nice, fast, catchy work. The boy has a ready smile and savoir-faire that have carried him far since he made his big hit as the hoofer in the stage show "Broadway."

MINUTE MYSTERY CAN YOU SOLVE IT?

BY H. A. RIDLEY

Copyright 1932 By Ben Stoloff Co. Inc.

Dr. Fordney is professor of criminology at a famous university. His advice is often sought by the police of many cities when confronted with particularly baffling cases. This problem has been taken from his case-book covering hundreds of criminal investigations.

Try your wits on it! It takes but ONE MINUTE to read! Every fact and every clew necessary to its solution are in the story itself—and there is only one answer. How good a detective are you?

CLASS DAY.

"Opening the door of my sister's bedroom, I found it in utter darkness. Only the ticking of the electric clock could I rear, but an eerie impression of something wrong was definite. A cold shiver ran down my spine.

"Hesitating a moment, I pressed the light switch. Apparently I was alone. The bed had been slept in, but my sister . . . where was she? Then, a low moaning sigh as I felt a blast of cold air rush by. I wanted to flee for mother, but seemed rooted to the spot. I was terrified!

"Somehow I managed to move and saw sister lying in a heap on the other side of the bed, her right hand clutching her throat. Was she dead? Although I tried to scream, my voice made no sound. Kneeling beside her I discovered that she was breathing. O! the relief! She responded to my frantic ministrations and slowly opened her eyes.

"'The window! The window!' she gasped.

"I looked out but could see nothing in the blackness of the night.

"Later she told me that as she dozed off she felt a presence in her room, a sensation of strangulation and utter helplessness. She tried to call for help, but found her throat paralyzed. In a moment, the presence disappeared through the window!"

"This is a strange tale, professor, but tell me, does your class think it an impossible one?"

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

[The solution to yesterday's mystery appears on page 27 today; the solution to today's mystery will be published Monday.]

Perhaps you have one you would like Prof. Fordney to submit to his class. If so, send it to him in care of this paper. He will be delighted to see what his students make of it.

Young Couples Want to Marry Despite Times

Trust Two Can Live Cheaply as One.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

The problem of the young couple who have been planning to marry but fear the current economic state too much to take the plunge grows apace.

Reason says "Don't marry until the dark financial clouds are lifted." Don't marry, anyway, until job-security is more settled. But youth says: "What have we to do with reason? We're in love. We want to get married." And who are we to argue against that force?

As a soporific there's always the old but dubious maxim to fall back upon about two being able to live as cheaply as one. Funny how modern youth will attach itself to this axiom applicable to an earlier day and discard others with a modern application.

Two probably could and did live as cheaply as one in those days when the woman's job in the home was an earning job. When her work represented savings in raising vegetables, in milking, in canning, quilting, chicken-raising, and so on. But mechanical advantages of our day have destroyed that old earning capacity. Even the wage-earning wife's job, nowadays, means a certain outlay of expense. So the problem of the young pair eager to marry becomes an acute one, because they cannot live as cheaply as one.

On their side, however, they have the new dollar value which, as you know, stretches a long way further than the '29 dollar. They have a new code of living to restrain them from the follies of a '27 or a '28 pair setting out on the great adventure. The Jones' sense of value has been substituted by a new kind of thrift thought. And they have the courage and optimism of youth.

Even so, it is upon the kind of woman chosen that the success of today's marriage venture depends. When money is plenty in the world it is said to be a man's world. When it is scarce, it is a woman's world. This word of advice we can at least offer the young men. The jazz-age type of girl will not do in this emergency. The wage-earning wife who holds that her earnings are hers to spend won't do. The cooperative wage earning wife and the girl who through thrifty management can make a dollar stretch its full one hundred cents' worth are the only ones worth considering.

Opera Season at Stadium to Open Tonight

Excellent Cast Ready to Present "Aida."

BY EDWARD MOORE.

THE center of opera, as far as Chicago is concerned, is moving west to the Chicago Stadium at 1800 West Madison street tonight. For there the grand opera company which has taken the name of the building in which it will appear is to begin a series of elaborate Saturday night performances promised to continue over an extended period. The first opera will be "Aida."

Preparations have been under way ever since midsummer. Maurice Frank, the impresario, has announced as his slogan that the works of the masters belong to the masses, and there seems considerable likelihood that this performance will be presented to the largest audience ever assembled for an indoor opera. From the beginning there has been an express promise that the performance would be of the first class, and at prices that can rightly bet ermed popular. Incidentally, the Stadium is able to seat 23,000 persons. The cost of seats will run from fifty-five cents, the lowest, to $2.20, the highest.

The stage will be at one end of the great arena. Scenery and modern lighting equipment will set the atmosphere of this musical drama of ancient Egypt. Below the stage level will be seated the orchestra, and sweeping up in an easy rise to the other end of the arena will be banked the tiers of seats. One of the many attractive promises made by the proponents of the season is one to the effect that every seat, no matter where in the vast expanse, will have full visibility and full audibility of the proceedings on the stage.

Advance reports indicate that the performance will be of generous proportions. The entire chorus, an extremely able one, has been taken over from the Chicago Civic Opera company, likewise the entire orchestra and the entire ballet. It is said that during the famous Triumph scene of the opera's second act, no less than 350 persons will take part in a spectacular pageant.

The cast of principals contains a number of notables. Among them are the Russian soprano, Anna Leskaya, who will appear in the title rôle of the opera; the Polish mezzo-soprano, Ina Bourskaya, now of the Metropolitan Opera, who has already made an enviable Chicago reputation for her appearances at the Auditorium and at Ravinia, as Ammeris; the Chicago tenor, John Pane-Gasser, making a debut here but with the record of many appearances in the famous opera houses of Italy, who will appear as Radames; the baritone, Martino-Rossi, likewise a debutant here and likewise the possessor of printed notices indicative of brilliant performances. It is something of a coincidence, by the way, that Mme. Bourskaya is making her first appearance in popular priced opera just nine years after she created a sensation with the Chicago Opera at the Auditorium, and in the same rôle.

Jacques Samossoud is the conductor, having occupied for a number of years the same position at the Metropolitan. The stage director is Bernard Cantor. The premiere danseuse is Martha Henkel, who is likewise premiere danseuse at the Metropolitan, and who will be the focal point of the picture in the Triumph scene.

Passavant Aid Society Makes Plans for Concert

Members of the sponsoring committee met yesterday at Passavant hospital to arrange plans for the concert to be given on Nov. 6 in Orchestra hall by Lawrence Tibbett, baritone, for the hospital's free bed fund. The concert is to be under the auspices of the hospital's Woman's Aid society, of which Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman is president.

A Job a Day

Every little improvement we make in our home right now helps us—and the other fellow, too.

Now is an excellent time to do something about that basement which always was "too warm." An overheated cellar means wasting fuel—and we aren't planning to do that little thing this winter! By covering boiler or furnace and heating pipes with asbestos or other heat insulating covering, the heat will be conserved and the basement made cooler. For insulation retains heat within your heating system the same as it does within your house and just as clothing keeps it within your body.

Declares High School Students Should Be in Bed by 10 O'clock

High school students should be in bed by 10 o'clock, Dr. Alexander Hershfield, former state alienist, told students of Thornton Township High school yesterd.., in an address in the high school auditorium.

"There is such a thing as sleep starvation," Dr. Hershfield said, "and the growing child needs nine or ten hours sleep every night. Only on Friday or Saturday nights should a student be allowed to stay up later than 10 o'clock.

"Don't be tempted to get away with small white lies," Dr. Hershfield warned the students. "Lying will bring about an inferiority complex as the result of establishing a reputation for untruths."

Rochow of Rock Island was reelected treasurer.

BY JUDITH CASS.

MISS BETTY FREY has decided upon Wednesday, Nov. 2, as the date for her marriage to Gail Borden, the ceremony to take place at 4 o'clock in the afternoon in the chapel of the Fourth Presbyterian church. The Rev. Dr. John Timothy Stone will officiate, assisted by the Rev. Harrison Ray Anderson.

Only the families will attend the wedding and the very small reception to follow at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Daniel Frey of 1435 State parkway.

Miss Frey's younger sister, Barbara, will be the maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will be Mrs. John Valentine of Chicago and Miss Catherine Doughtie of Norfolk, Va.

Mr. Borden's brother, Henry Lee Borden, will be his best man, and the list of ushers hasn't been completed yet. Miss Frey's engagement to Mr. Borden was announced late in June, shortly before she and her mother and Barbara and Charles Jr. sailed to spend the summer abroad. They returned last month, not long before Miss Frey attended Miss Elinor Durbin at her marriage to S. Prentice Porter on Sept. 27.

Mr. Borden, who is a Chicago newspaper writer, is a son of Dr. and Mrs. Gavin Hamilton of Houston, Tex.

Dance for Two Debutantes.

Mr. and Mrs. Alden B. Swift and Mr. and Mrs. John L. Senior are to give a dinner dance on Dec. 27 at the Casino for their debutante daughters, Miss Lydia Swift and Miss Mary Senior. It will be Miss Swift's formal presentation to society, but Miss Senior made her formal bow at a tea in Lake Forest on Sept. 17.

Miss Charlotte Capen Eckhart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy B. Eckhart, will become the bride of Thomas Roswell Coyne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Coyne of Kenilworth, at 4 o'clock this afternoon in the drawing room of the Eckhart residence in Kenilworth.

The Rev. Dr. Herbert Willett will perform the ceremony in the presence of the families and a few close friends. A few more guests have been invited to attend the wedding reception later.

The bride's wedding ensemble is to be trimmed with rose pointe lace which was worn by her maternal great-grandmother, Mrs. Robert Briggs of Bloomington, for whom she was named, and by her mother. Miss Eckhart is a granddaughter of the late Bernard A. Eckhart and Mrs. Eckhart of Chicago and of the late Charles L. Capen and Mrs. Capen of Bloomington.

The bride's three sisters, Mrs. Donald H. McLaughlin of Cambridge, Mass., Mrs. James R. D. Stevenson

M. E. Pastors Deny Rock River Conference Report Is Socialistic

Dixon, Ill., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—Ministers attending the Rock River conference of the Methodist Episcopal church today expressed indignation at the term "socialistic" applied in Chicago dispatches to the report of the committee on public policy made public yesterday.

On motion of the Rev. John Thompson of Chicago, a committee was appointed to draft a resolution which will be submitted to the conference tomorrow condemning the interpretation of the report in the CHICAGO TRIBUNE. The committee appointed the Rev. A. M. Pennewell, pastor of Ravenswood M. E. church, Chicago, as chairman.

A poll of 100 ministers today showed 86 for Hoover for president and 14 for Thomas, the Socialist candidate. No votes were cast for Roosevelt. This poll was pointed to by the ministers as evidence that they are not socialist-minded.

The Murder of Caroline Bundy

By ALICE CAMPBELL.

SYNOPSIS.

Neil Starkey, American biographer, is engaged by Caroline Bundy to compile the life and letters of her late father, a famous English biologist. Miss Bundy is in poor health and acting peculiarly. She has hired a photographer, named Tilbury, as bailiff, and he and his wife, an ill bred pair, hold a strange influence over her. Natasha Andreyev, Caroline's half Russian niece, acts as her aunt's secretary. She detests the Tilburys. Caroline tells Neil that her father, a man of science, was also a mystic. Caroline and the Tilburys hold nightly meetings in the library. Giles Gisbourne, vicar of a nearby parish, and his sister, Rachel, are friends of Neil's. Neil is attracted to Natasha, but is baffled by her odd behavior. She is giving money to a man she meets secretly. Caroline promises to visit Emily Braselton, an old friend, in Paris. Natasha drives her to London. She returns a few days later and tells Neil that her aunt gave her a pearl necklace, which she sold. She receives a wire which Caroline sent from London, asking her to look for an alligator bag left in the car. The bag is not found. Caroline doesn't reach Paris. The police are notified. Caroline's body is found in a ditch near her estate. She'd been brutally murdered. Neil realizes that Natasha will be under suspicion. She refuses to account for all her time in London. Neil goes to London to check up on Natasha's movements there.

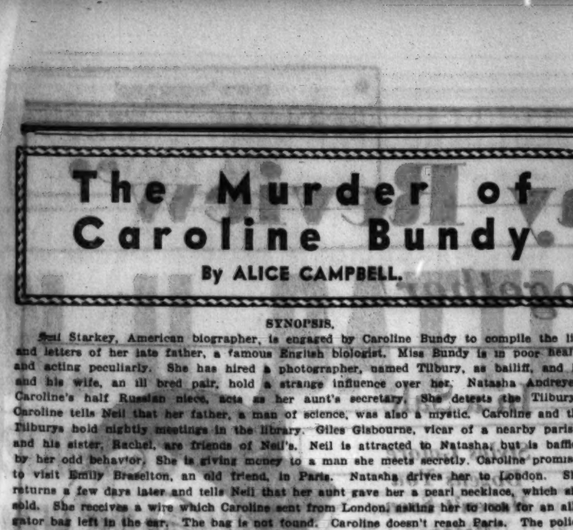
INSTALLMENT XXX.

THE INQUEST.

"Now I understand why she was always poking about the pavement of the Glebe house!" cried Neil in sudden illumination. "There are entries in Bundy's diary, too, which ——"

"Wait," said Gisborne. "For all her father-worship, Carrie was a canny creature. She, too, had no wish to be laughed at. That's why she came to me, hoping, of course, that I would sanction the enterprise already forming in her brain, in which case she could go ahead without further scruples. She brought forward Bligh Bond's experiments at Glastonbury—the lost Edgar Chapel, and so on, which you both know about—arguing that if the thing had happened once it could happen again.

"And here," he continued, "is where I put my foot in it. I forthwith proceeded to throw cold water on the whole affair, which in my eyes was a clever charlatan's game, nothing more. As I pointed out, the photographic plates could easily have been faked by the simple trick of double exposures. How could she be sure Tilbury was what he pretended, an ignorant, well meaning little man, knowing little of the Glastonbury legends and nothing at all of her father? In my zeal to save her from wasting money and being made ridiculous, I went too far and reminded her that many serious students looked on the emblem in question as a pagan symbol not spiritual at all, but quite the reverse. In short, I mortally offended her. I was an irreligious vandal, and she flounced out of my study with a flea in her ear. Thenceforward she loathed me and my worldliness with a bitter hatred.



"Very soon afterwards I learned she had taken up the Tilbury couple, was holding seances with them, and heaping them with benefits."

"Very soon afterwards I learned she had taken up the Tilbury couple, was holding seances with them, and heaping them with benefits. If I could have stopped her making a fool of herself I'd have done so, but knowing how useless it was to interfere and having given my solemn word not to divulge her secret, I held my tongue and did nothing. I could not see any grave harm in what she was doing, and even now I fail to perceive the remotest connection between her delusion, if it was a delusion, and her death. Can you find any?"

Rachel and Neil looked at each other, and the latter drew in a long breath. He was thinking of that hitherto obscure line in Bundy's diary, how did it run? Yes, he recalled the precise words: "By this sign will the millennium be inaugurated." No need now to ask what sign was meant, yet he did ask.

"Eh? O, you've probably guessed. The shadowy form overhanging the ruin was shaped like a cup with two handles. What poor Carrie hoped to find in the ancient passage, placed there, I suppose, by St. Joseph of Arimathea, was, of course, the holy grail itself."

The coroner's court was crowded. Near the front the Stoke Paulton servants forming a sedate group, with Crabbe at their head, while a little apart from them sat Alfred and Connie Tilbury, stiff and subdued in new, semi-mourning attire.

When the party from the vicarage entered, necks craned and a sibilant murmur ran round. Plainly the dead woman's niece was an object of intense interest, and at sight of her between the two Gisbornes many eyebrows were raised questioningly. She, however, seemed unaware of the stir her presence created.

Rachel whispered this, directing her companion's attention to the rigid, imposing figure seated across the aisle. It was Emily Braselton. Her grief stricken eyes, heavily circled, were hawklike and vindictive, her chin was set with a forbidding aggressiveness vaguely alarming in its suggestion. Was she here with any definite purpose in mind?

As the coroner cleared his throat portentously, a police sergeant creaked up to the platform and laid a folded slip of paper directly under his eye. The good man glared affrontedly at the note, seeming to regard any interruption as an offense to his dignity, waited till the unfortunate sergeant had retired, and without opening the communication began a prosy address.

The court doctor, by contrast, was dry and to the point. Having performed a complete autopsy on the victim, he could state positively that the latter's organs contained neither drug nor poison, and were indeed in a healthy condition. Death had resulted solely from the blows administered to the skull by means of some instrument, probably metallic, like a hammer or heavy spanner.

Particles of dirt lodged in the mouth and nostrils indicated that the body had fallen face downward, probably after the initial blow, but this in itself furnished no proof of the attack having taken place near the spot where the victim was found.

While the time of the assault could not be pinned down with exactitude, there could be little doubt as to the approximate hour of the body's consignment to the ditch. The saturated condition of the clothing showed that it must have lain in its hiding place during at least part of the heavy rainfall which lasted from nine p. m. to midnight on Friday, 20th March. After this date there had been no local shower till after the discovery of the crime.

William Crabbe was called. Asked if during his seventeen years' service at Stoke Paulton he had suspected any one of cherishing malevolence towards his mistress, he gave a firm negative.

Coroner: "Then you don't know of any person bearing Miss Bundy a grudge, uttering threats, or in any way causing a disturbance?"

Crabbe: "No, sir. There was just a small unpleasantness lately, over a gardener she sacked."

Coroner: "Indeed! I should like you to tell the jury exactly what happened and all about it."

The butler complied, obviously with reluctance. He was sure the gardener, an old man, had meant no harm. He himself could venture no opinion as to the rights of the case, although he knew the gardener thought himself badly used.

Coroner: "Did the discharged man appear to brood or to harbor ill-feelings?"

Crabbe: "He certainly never used abusive language in my hearing. He's not that sort."

The name and present whereabouts of Peters were obtained. The other servants were then questioned without disclosing anything suggestive, and last, Alfred Tilbury was called.

The bailiff stood up promptly and in a low, husky voice repeated the oath, after which he was seized with such a violent fit of coughing that some time elapsed before he could go on. His air of fragility, combined with his assiduous efforts to control the spasms, roused sympathy in the onlookers.

Modestly and frankly he described the circumstances which had led to his holding his present position. A photographer by trade, he had had occasion to do some professional work for Miss Bundy, who, towards the end of February, had offered him the post of bailiff.

He went on to explain that believing the open air life would benefit him, he had somewhat diffidently accepted the offer, and that during his brief sojourn at Stoke Paulton he had been very happy. Miss Bundy was a lady in a thousand, a kind, considerate friend, the loss of whom in such distressing circumstances was more than he could bear to contemplate.

Asked if he knew of any enemies the deceased might have had, Tilbury emphatically denied the suggestion. True, his late mistress had occasionally hinted that certain nameless persons were prone to take advantage of her good nature. He imagined something of the sort in the case of Peters, but could say nothing for sure. Still, he had no definite knowledge, and it was not his place to cast aspersions. If Miss Bundy were anxious to secure reliable servants, that was only natural for one in failing health. He and his wife had been much worried over her recent illness and delighted at the idea that she was going abroad with the friend who would look after her properly. She had seemed in excellent spirits when she left home, perfectly cheerful, with no sign of anything on her mind.

Jr., and Miss Elizabeth Eckhart, who arrived at home yesterday from Vassar, will be her attendants. Willis Littell will be best man for Mr. Coyne and James R. D. Stevenson and William Nichols will usher.

Milburn Hunt Club Dance.

The dinner dance to be given this evening at the Milburn Hunt club will be in keeping with the general trend toward simplicity and informality which the club has established this season. It will be a Dutch treat affair, with the guests dividing the expenses, and there are to be no decorations other than the glow of firelight and candles.

Mrs. Kimball Salisbury and Mrs. Merrill Hubbard have taken care of the arrangements and have reserved places for most of the little club's membership. Among the guests will be the Austin H. Niblacks, the Junior Edward A. Cudahys, the William H. Mitchells, the Lester Armours, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen Jr., Mr. and Mrs. George F. McLaughlin, and Mr. and Mrs. Laurance H. Armour.

Most of the "young marrieds" in Lake Forest are planning to celebrate Halloween on Saturday, the 29th, by attending the dinner dance to be given that night at the Deerpath inn by the Lake Forest Arden Shore committee. A special dance, with a radio for a prize, and a fortune teller are among the extra entertainment feautres of the party.

Mrs. George F. McLaughlin is in charge of tickets and reservations. Among those who already have planned parties are the Junior John F. Jelkes, the Kent Chandlers, Mr. and Mrs. Kingman Douglass, and Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert E. Porter III.

Expect Society at Stadium.

How interested Society [with a capital S] is in the opening tonight of the Chicago Stadium Grand Opera season it is not possible to say, for no list of boxholders has been announced, although many of the former patrons of grand opera in the Civic Opera house and the old Auditorium undoubtedly will be at the Stadium tonight.

It may be that before long the Stadium Grand Opera will have a list of boxholders as long, if not longer, than the Chicago Civic Opera had, but there is no such list for tonight's première. There will be numerous Dutch treat box parties, however, of persons who were vitally interested in the late Civic Opera and it is they, no doubt, who will sit on the "jury" that the sponsors of "opera for the masses" feel will decide tonight whether society will support Stadium Grand Opera or not. Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Mrs. Walter Borden, Mrs. Francis J. Johnson, Mrs. Jacob Baur, and Mrs. Charles H. Swift are a few of those who plan to be there.

Get Store for Clothes Sale.

The Junior league has found a store in which to hold its fall sale of second-hand clothing next Thursday. Mrs. John Cuneo has offered the committee the use of first floor space at 157 North Michigan avenue which the league members consider a most desirable setting for their sale.

The girls in charge of the league sales have always managed to secure quarters free of charge, and since all of the preliminary work and the handling of the sale itself is done by the members, every penny of the proceeds goes to charity.

The stock to be sold this year is as large and varied as ever, we're told, and there will be a plentiful supply of winter clothing for both men and women. They are considering having some of the members model clothes in the windows. Much of the credit for these overwhelmingly successful rummage sales should go to Mrs. Roger O. White, the league's efficient business manager.

Mrs. Gillette Enters Business.

The most interesting bit of news that has come this way in some time about society women who are becoming business women is that Mrs. Howard F. Gillette is to have space in Conveniences, Mrs. Frank Hibbard's little bureau on East Oak street. Mrs. Hibbard's bureau is conducted for charity's sake, but I understand Mrs. Gillette's venture is to be strictly a business one. Mrs. Gillette is expected to return from Biddeford Pool, Me., next week.

After having resided abroad for more than a year, Mrs. Pauling Donnelley has returned and is reopening her house in Lake Forest. She spent much of her time in France this summer and went to Ireland last month to visit her brother-in-law and sister, the John Elliotts of New York, who took a house there for the hunting season.

Mme. Giovanni Cardelli will depart on Tuesday to spend two months or more in Paris, where she has an apartment. She had planned to go to Encenada, Mexico, before sailing for Europe to visit her son and daughter-in-law, Count and Countess Cardelli, but has decided that the trip will make her itinerary too complicated. The young Cardellis are to remain in Mexico for the winter.

Mrs. Alfred T. Martin and her sister, Mrs. Philip Hamill, and Miss Marjorie Hamill sailed last week to spend the winter in Paris.

The Perry H. Kenlys have returned to their apartment at 70 Cedar street after a summer at Nantucket.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Beach Clow will return this week-end from a three weeks' sojourn in the east.

Mrs. Buchanan With Mother.

Mrs. Winterbotham Buchanan, who was in the White mountains early in the summer and later went abroad, has returned to Franconia, N. H., to be with her mother, Mrs. John R. Winterbotham, who is remaining there at her estate until late in the autumn. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Poole also are there, but they expect to go to New York soon to spend the winter there instead of staying on at Sugar Hill as they sometimes have done.

Our correspondent in the White mountains writes that the beauty of the autumn foliage has prompted the New Hampshire Hotel association to meet and discuss plans for an autumn foliage festival in the hills next season, similar to that which draws thousands to Virginia in blossom time.

Among the visitors to the White mountains this year to see the maple trees in their colorful glory were many Chicagoans, including Mrs. John G. Shedd and her daughter, Mrs. Charles H. Schweppe, Miss Clara Gilbert, and Mrs. Edward E. Gardner of Evanston.

Mrs. Edward A. Leight returned a few days ago from a four months' summer holiday in the east, and immediately offered her services to the ticket committee for the Tibbett concert scheduled for Nov. 6 to benefit Passavant hospital. She has been a director of the Passavant Woman's Aid, which is sponsoring the concert, for 22 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Greene arrived in New York on Tuesday and will return to Chicago next week. They have been traveling on the continent and in England for the last six months.

Two Christening Parties Tomorrow.

Mrs. Jacob Baur is entertaining at luncheon tomorrow at her residence, 1511 Astor street, following the christening of Dorothy Cara Strong, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce W. Strong, for whom Mrs. Baur and Mr. and Mrs. William Radford will be godparents.

The christening will take place at St. Chrysostom's church, the baby wearing a lace robe made by her great-grandmother, Mrs. Louis Falk, and worn by her grandmother, Mrs. Franklin M. Miller, and her mother, the former Dorothy Miller. Mr. and Mrs. Miller, whose wedding anniversary is today, have invited about eighty of their friends to their residence, 1500 Lake Shore drive, tomorrow from 4 to 6 o'clock, for an old-fashioned christening party.

The committee in charge of the supper dance to be given in the Hotel Sherman ballroom on Armistice night for the benefit of the Red, White, and Blue club is planning an unusual entertainment feature, something never before given in this country, to be announced later. Mrs. Edward R. Fifield is general chairman.

Cards are out for the Woman's Athletic club's first morning program of the season—a recital next Thursday by Jacques Gordon, to be followed by a special club luncheon.

Oil Treatment Advised for the Dyed Head

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

On one hand you do see thoroughly good looking bleached and dyed heads of hair, but on the other many, many with that coarse, dried-out look to the hair that no one could call beautiful.

I do wish women would realize that if they are going in for hair tinting they must do something to preserve the soft texture. Otherwise the new color, though it may be all right in itself, turns out anything but a beauty asset.

In the better salons now you are treated to an oil-conditioning before the henna pack is applied. Hairdressers realize that the constant application of henna packs without some conditioning treatment gives the hair that dried out look just spoken of. It's it and the spotty coloring that prejudices the average observer against hair touching.

If it is to be done for reasons best known to your own self, make up your mind that you will not let your hair fall into this disapproved class. If you do your own bleaching or dyeing job, don't think that the hair coloring is all there is to be done. Give yourself an oil treatment at least once a week.

They're not hard to do at home. You need only a couple of ounces of olive oil. Apply it warm, as it spreads more easily when heated. Section the hair off so you can rub the oil into the scalp. If the ends of the hair are particularly dry, rub oil on the palms of the hand and rub the hair ends between them. Let the oil remain on the scalp and hair ten minutes.

Then, shampoo with a good castile soap. You will find the oil loosens surface deposits and dirt on the scalp and hair. And the hair is left soft. Do this before you apply your henna pack, or peroxide bleach, or whatever coloring you use. Then, don't wait until next hair-coloring day to have another oil treatment. Give yourself one semi-monthly, or once a week.

The henna color or any other dyed or bleached shade has a better tone because of the glistening sheen you preserve in your hair.

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—There are certain fashions that creep in on one insidiously rather than leaping into startling prominence. Plaited skirts are one of the sneak in the night kind that have been bobbing up recently with increasing frequency. Last summer they could be detected here and there in the evening mode, and now they have crashed the gates of the woolen day frock mode. They are canny enough, however, to retain the slim line that means 1932-'33 chic.

In the sketch today is shown a woolen frock from Heim that favors plaits. It is black, in a wool crepon. The bodice has for its upper half a white silk crêpe bolero jacket which extends down over the shoulders. This jacket has a tiny collar, and it fastens over with a flap buttoned on to a single red button. An irregular décolleté just below the button exposes the skin.

The sleeves of this dress are in finely plaited wool, and give a new version of the balloon sleeve, the plaits being stitched part way to the elbow and released to make a huge puff, which ends below the elbows, in a long cuff.

'Little Women' Will Be Set in Time of Story

Decision Follows Poll of Film Fans.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 14.—As a result of 6,000 letters received by R-K-O in response to a question whether film fans wanted "Little Women" made in the style, setting, and times that Louisa M. Alcott placed her story or whether it should be modernized as to costume and actions the studio is going to keep the film version of the story in the early 1800's as Miss Alcott wrote it. The division in preference was roughly 4,500 who wanted the film to follow the story to 1,500 who preferred it flapperized.

Mae West is trying to barter with the thieves who robbed her of $16,000 in diamonds and $3,400 in cash two weeks ago. She says, "After receiving the anonymous telephone call which directed me where to find my emptied purse I have been waiting for them to call again and to dicker to return the diamonds to me for cash."

Not to be outdone by the motion picture academy, which gives awards supposed to denote the finest performances by actress, actor, director, screen writer, etc., during the year, the Wampas association is going to put up annual awards emblematic of the year's most noteworthy examples of motion picture publicity, advertising, and still photography. The contest is intended to embrace the work of theaters all over the United States and the movie press agents in Hollywood and New York.

Miriam Hopkins, who flew from Hollywood to New York a week ago, flew back again last night and said her 7,000 mile trip was undertaken "merely to get a little recreation in the city."

It's Question Day Again in Cooking Realm

Query Is Brain Indication, So Voice Troubles.

BY MARY MEADE.

The brainiest women I know are those who ask the most questions. Naturally so, for it's not the number of facts we can recite that is a sign of growth, but the persistency and speed with which we pick up new knowledge. That is why we have turned this column each Saturday into a free for all question clinic. Kitchen troubles and quests for elusive recipes which are not given attention through the mail are here aired, and—we're hoping—satisfactorily settled. We should appreciate it, however, if you would accompany your requests with return envelopes, as it is not always possible to answer these unlabeled letters in our Saturday column.

First, an S O S from Mrs. M. N., who is having sticking tragedies with her waffle iron. "Please tell me," she writes, "how to recondition my waffle iron. I have tried it only once and that time the waffle stuck so badly I didn't believe we would ever get it picked out."

Something wrong here. No waffle iron of reliable make should ever stick if it has been properly conditioned before the first using. Once dough has burned on it, it may be impossible to return it to perfect working order. It may even be necessary in the future to grease it. But before you resort to that extreme, try the following: Clean it thoroughly with a wire brush and wipe free from particles with a soft dry cloth. Never wash the grids and never put the iron under water or the heating elements will be injured.

Now heat it for ten minutes, turn off the current, and allow the iron to cool. When it is just warm, oil the top and bottom grids with olive oil, applying it with a small brush. Set the iron away for four hours, then wipe off the extra oil with a soft cloth. Heat to the correct baking temperature and pour in a trial waffle. Bake and discard the waffle. The following waffles may be used, and the iron should never need oiling again, if the first mishaps have not actually ruined the resistance of the metal.

Question No. 2: [From Miss H. H.]—"I am contemplating giving a bridge party followed by a buffet supper instead of the usual potato chips, salad, and rolls usually served at the tables at such affairs. What would be a correct menu? Are canapés correct at such a supper?"

Answer: Yes, canapés may be used in either of two ways—as dainty accompaniments to a generous fruit salad or as more substantial offerings composed of toasted bread rounds topped with deviled ham and finely chopped gherkins or sliced, hard cooked egg. But why not try the following buffet menu, self-served from a table made graciously inviting with gay linen, low floral centerpiece, and soft taper light? As pièce de résistance serve one of these long white salad and sandwich loafs, decrusted, and cut lengthwise in four even slices. Spread the slices with melted butter and between the first two spread mayonnaise and cover with thin, peeled slices of tomato. Between the second and third spread chopped pickle mixed with chopped ham and held together with mayonnaise. The filling between the third and top slice may be chopped hard boiled egg, mayonnaise, and finely shredded lettuce. Frost the whole loaf with softened cream cheese and serve on a platter garnished with cress and black olives.

This will be the only food the hostess will serve. The guests may then help themselves to half pears filled with chopped nuts, inch wedges of cantaloupe sprinkled with minced candied ginger, and sugared raspberries served on grape leaves. Later coffee, daffodil cake and tiny balls of New York ice cream may be served from the same table, cleared while the guests were enjoying the first course.

Question No. 3: [From Miss A. P.]—"I wonder if you could send me a recipe for orange rind cake. . . ."

ORANGE RIND CAKE.

1 cup sugar
5 tablespoons butter
2 eggs, separated
1 medium sized orange, rind and juice
1 2-3 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt

Cream the sugar and butter until fluffy, then cream in the well beaten egg yolks. Grate the rind from the orange and add it, then sift in the sifted dry ingredients alternately with ¼ cup of orange juice. Fold in the egg whites which have been beaten until stiff and turn the batter into two greased shallow layer pans. Place in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.] and bake 25 minutes. A plain uncooked cocoanut frosting and filling is delectable with this cake.

STAGG TO SEEK NEW COACHING JOB NEXT FALL

BY ARCH WARD.

The University of Chicago, which Thursday appointed Thomas Nelson Metcalf of Iowa State college as athletic director in 1933, will also have a new football coach next season.

THE TRIBUNE learned from an authoritative source last night that A. A. Stagg will not be retained. Technically the position is still open to the only coach the Maroons have had. His successor will be recommended by the new athletic director.

THE TRIBUNE'S informant said the prevailing sentiment among the board of trustees was for Stagg's retirement as football coach as well as athletic director.

Stagg to Seek New Job.

Mr. Stagg has been offered the chairmanship of the university's committee on intercollegiate athletics at the same salary he was paid as athletic director and football coach. But there were definite indications yesterday that he will seek employment elsewhere as a coach.

"The university has been very kind to me in my 41 years of service," Mr. Stagg said. "They have volunteered to keep me at my old salary, but the position would take me out of my field, which is coaching.

"I feel that I am under obligation to accept this new position for a year. However, if I were offered an opportunity to coach elsewhere, or to combine coaching with an athletic directorship, and if I thought I could fill the job satisfactorily, I would feel justified in asking for a release at Chicago.

Stagg Unwilling to Quit.

"I am not willing to be taken out of my field. Forty-three years ago I decided to devote my life to training young men and I feel that I still have something of value to offer them through such close contact as football coaching requires.

"I enjoy coaching," he said. "Candidly, I believe that no young coach could compete with me if both of us had the same material. I believe my ideas of football coaching are sound. I know how to handle men. I know how to shape material. I have the knowledge and experience to make necessary adjustments. And I have inventive ability. My mind is active in devising formations and I know how to carry them out."

RETAIN STAGG POLICY

Ames, Ia., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—Thomas Nelson Metcalf, who yesterday was appointed successor to A. A. Stagg as athletic director at the University of Chicago, today said he had not had time to form definite policies and plans for his administration on the Midway.

"The responsibility of taking over Mr. Stagg's work is an appalling one. It is my opinion that no man has made so great a contribution to intercollegiate athletics and to football in particular as has Mr. Stagg," Metcalf said.

Metcalf Lauds Stagg.

"For more than forty years he has stood out as the champion of good sportsmanship, clean athletics and of all that is best in athletic standards. As a football coach and as the senior member of the football rules committee, Mr. Stagg deserves credit for many of the best points in the technique, strategy and rules of modern football.

"It will be my earnest endeavor to carry on the athletic administration in accord with those high principles and traditions that always have characterized Chicago's athletic record. It

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Columbus, O., Oct. 14.—"I'm afraid we're going to be bumped off." Such was the official opinion of Coach Harry Kipke when he arrived this morning at the head of the squad of Michigan football players for the 29th renewal of the rivalry with Ohio State tomorrow afternoon.

The Wolverines, who this fall have conquered two of their strongest opponents, Michigan State and Northwestern, went through a final secret practice in the Ohio stadium this afternoon. There Harry Newman, quarter back, unlimbered his slingshot arm, shooting accurate passes to a scampering group of backs and ends. Jack Regaczi, sophomore full back and Herman Everhardus sent long kicks down field in preliminary test of air currents pocketed by the concrete stands.

Is Mr. Kipke Foolin'?

Kipke's actions did not conform with his speech for publication. He and his lieutenants did not act as if they were on the verge of a one way ride which would blast their conference championship hopes. It is a question whether Kipke has been able to make his boys believe as much, despite last year's defeat by the Buckeyes, a defeat which would have cost Michigan a share in the 1931 title had it been not for the set of post-season games arranged in the name of charity.

This confidence may be the undoing of the Wolverines, for all are agreed that Ohio State has shown more speed and more determination in this week's drill than heretofore. The Buckeyes this afternoon, when they followed Michigan to the field for practice, had no time for playful exercise. To any spectator their intentness was apparent.

The success or failure of Ohio's season rests on tomorrow's game. Tied by a team of hustling Hoosiers last week, defeat by Michigan will relegate the Buckeyes to the field of also rans and may result in repercussions which will add to the list of unemployed coaches.

Kipke has made changes in his starting lineup. He expects to give young Tom Austin, a Columbus boy, a chance at guard in place of Russell Damm. In Michigan's line there will be three sophomores. Besides Austin, Hildebrand, left tackle, and Kowalik, left guard, are favored for the opening kickoff.

Michigan has a number of replacements for tackles and guards. The strength of the offense rests on the veteran ends, Petoskey and Capt. Williamson, and on the fast junior half backs, Everhardus, Stanley Fay and Jack Heston, not to mention Regeczi at full back and Newman, a senior. Regeczi and Everhardus are rated better kickers than Carl Cramer and Capt. Lew Hinchman of Ohio.

Hinchman may not start. He has been an invalid because of a back injury until last night, when he was in uniform. If he is out, Keefe will get the job. He has been alternating with Carroll at the other half.

Expect Crowd of 50,000.

Fifty thousand are expected to see the game. If this figure is reached or surpassed, it depends on the sale of the general admission tickets for $1.50. The Michigan band will arrive in the morning on the students' special from Ann Arbor. Other trains are coming from Toledo and Cleveland, but the influx will be less than half of the crowds which thronged Columbus two years ago. Even so, the attendance will set the pace for the conference.

COME ON, YOU WOLVERINES!

Army Is Set for Pitt, But It Looks Bad

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 14.—The Army football team seems to be the underdog in the game with Pitt, to be played tomorrow afternoon in Michie stadium, which is an intimate little football park up on the bluff above the roofs of the military academy buildings. The Pitt team is supposed to be about the best in the east at this time and the Army squad is comparatively green, without many experienced substitutes.

The Pitt people came in this morning in a special car. There were thirty-three football players, attended by about twenty coaches, bottleholders, stretcher bearers, and cheer leaders. There were also ten stretchy young men in a group socially apart from the football expedition, coming to scamp along the autumn scenery of the Catskill foothills in a cross country race against the West Point runners. The West Point team won the cross country run, 25 to 30. Cross country running, like golf, is scored backward, the low score being the winning score.

The running went on while the Pitt football team worked out in the stadium, severely let alone by the officers and cadets of the military academy who did not wish to seem inhospitable but did not wish to seem to be nosing into their guests' private affairs, either.

During this time, the Army football players were scattered all over the immediate countryside, learning the significance of various knobs, wheels, bolts and gadgets on field guns, mortars, one-pounders and machine-guns and they did not find time for any

Hornsby, Denied Series Cut, Plans to See Lawyers

Rogers Hornsby, who yesterday was denied a share in the Cubs' world series money by decision of K. M. Landis, last night said he had not received official notice of the commissioner's ruling.

"If the newspaper accounts are true, I shall consult my attorneys as to what action to take," Hornsby stated in a telephone conversation from his home near St. Louis.

Mr. Landis in the announcement of his decision said that only players eligible to compete in the world series were entitled to a share. Hornsby was removed as manager of the Cubs on Aug. 2. Players must be with a club on Aug. 31 to be eligible for the post-season competition.

"Landis had the authority to grant me a share if he desired," Hornsby said. "He can overrule the vote of the players any time. I told him so in a recent letter and submitted proof.

"The players undoubtedly were acting under instructions when they voted me out in the world series split. I know there were several who would have held out for me if they had not been ordered what to do.

"While my player contract was canceled at the time Mr. Veeck let me out, I still am on the pay roll as manager, and will be until Dec. 31."

Indiana Talks About Beating Iowans Today

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Bloomington, Ind., Oct. 14.—Indiana by three touchdowns. That's what the betting gents think about Indiana's chances to beat Iowa tomorrow for the first time in history.

Coach Hayes of the Hoosiers does not publicly share the optimism of the betting gentry, but this afternoon he put himself in a rather paradoxical spot by giving his charges a complete layoff, except that they had to listen to a gymnasium lecture on how tough Iowa is.

After the lecture Mr. Hayes gave out a formal statement to Hoosier homecomers, the import of which was that Indiana shouldn't be overconfident. The coach backed up his conservatism by pointing out that Iowa looked like a setup for Indiana last year, but rallied sufficiently to hold the Hoosiers to a scoreless tie. "Iowa is stronger than last year," quoth the coach, "and remember what overconfidence did on that occasion."

Indiana Figures Anyway.

The fact remains, however, that Indiana figures to give the Hawks a rather sound trimming, this observation being based on Iowa's showing against Wisconsin last week in taking the short end of a 34 to 0 count, as contrasted with the sprightly conduct of the Hoosiers in tying Ohio State, 7 to 7. There were many who believed Indiana outplayed the Buckeyes, but little can be said in behalf of the Hawks the last time out.

It is said that no Indiana team in recent years has approached its third game of the season in as fine shape physically as that enjoyed by the cur-

BADGERS ON WAY UP OR DOWN? IT'S PURDUE'S GUESS

Game Today Will Solve Big Ten Mystery.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Lafayette, Oct. 14. — Another Wisconsin football hope, of which there have been many, may be blasted off its foundation here tomorrow. Then again, Purdue, the one-time little boy of the conference who has suddenly grown into a swaggering giant, may be reduced temporarily to its former state by the elixir of life furnished to the Wisconsin football situation by the eminent Dr. Clarence Spears.

If Dr. Spears' medicine does its work, Purdue will have to move back from the ranks of the few teams now entertaining Big Ten championship ideas, and if the medicine fails, Wisconsin will have to step out just as it has stepped innumerable times in the last twenty years.

Just Flip a Coin!

It is a battle than can go either way, considering Purdue's 7 to 0 win over Minnesota and the Badgers' rout of Iowa by a 34 to 0 score last Saturday. It's that Iowa score that has the 15,000 prospective spectators fearful of the Cardinal potency on attack.

Nobody ever has been able to call the turn on a Wisconsin eleven. They have won time and again when counted on to lose, and they've lost when everybody figured them to cut themselves in on a share of the Big Ten title. That's what has made it tough for coaches at Madison. It's the thing that will make it tough for Dr. Spears if, after the flying start against Iowa, he doesn't go through without any bad marks on his slate. But the good Doctor in his coaching career has shown marvelous skill in diagnosing all internal difficulties, and that's why Purdue, not to mention future Wisconsin opponents, are slightly feverish.

Badgers in Great Condition.

If Wisconsin has any apparent edge for tomorrow's meeting it is in the physical condition of its men. The Iowa battle, after a brief scare at the start, developed into such a foot race that the Badgers didn't have to take chances. This easy struggle, with the heavy work spread around, left the men of Camp Randall almost clean of serious aches or bruises.

The Boilermakers aren't in that happy state. A team that plays the usual bruising elevens turned out at Minnesota seldom is the same for a week afterwards. The Boilermakers had to fight to get the seven points by which they won and then fight harder to make the seven points stand up. At least four of the Purdue regulars will go into the argument carrying painful marks of their efforts at Minneapolis. The spots in which these bruises are located are being concealed out of fear that the Badgers, if they know too much in advance, might, inadvertently, of course, make good use of their knowledge.

Febring Back in Shape.

Dr. Spears didn't think it necessary to bring his charges down here until tomorrow noon, but from word passed along the route, it seems likely that he, as well as Noble Kizer, the Boilermaker football teacher, will start off with about the same lineups in their respective games as last Saturday. The one probable alteration will occur at Purdue's left tackle. Bill Febring, who had injuries which confined him to relief work against Minnesota, will start in place of John Firpo Husar, a Chicago boy.

Both teams offensively follow similar lines. Their running game is built around powerful, smashing interference. At passing Purdue might show an edge, also in punting. But it is the defense that always is important, and the Boilermakers are supposed to excel in this feature.

Stagg's Return to Yale?

Dear Wake: What's all this about Stagg not being back to Yale with an athletic team for 40 years? Not with a football team, perhaps, but he did lead a baseball team to Yale years ago. Don't know the date, but as the Maroons took an awful licking, maybe it's best to "let the dead past," etc.

MORTON PREPS PROTEST FIRING OF COACH WALKER

Demonstrations of protest in the school halls followed announcement yesterday that Fred M. Walker had been served a 30 day notice of dismissal as football coach of Morton High school. Walker was charged with neglect of duty by Maj. W. P. McLean, director of physical education.

According to John J. Sherlock, member of the Cicero school board, Maj. McLean filed a report to President Frank A. Svoboda charging that Walker did not devote his afternoons to his gym classes. Walker also is a member of the physical education staff. President Svoboda announced that Walker will appear before the school board meeting the second Monday in November to answer the charges.

"Maj. McLean wrote President Svoboda about Walker charging neglect of duty. That's all I know about it," Sherlock said last night.

Walker, after coaching at several universities, including De Pauw, came to Morton two years ago. He was assistant coach last year and this season was appointed head coach. He is a former University of Chicago athlete.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 14.—The old Illinois rallying cry of "Beat Northwestern" was echoing over the campus of the University of Illinois tonight and the conviction was growing that the Illini might possibly corral a victory when they meet the Wildcats tomorrow in the annual homecoming game in Memorial stadium.

A crowd of 20,000, perhaps as many as 30,000 if the weather continues mild, will attend. While the crowd will be the smallest at a homecoming since the stadium was built, the enthusiasm here is approaching if not equaling that of the halcyon days of Red Grange and the championship teams of 1927 and 1928.

Somebody Forgot [?].

The refrain of "Beat Northwestern" began ringing through the streets of the university district last night when the tribe of Illini, the organization of Illinois letter men, paraded to stir up enthusiasm and some one with a faulty knowledge of the calendar ignited, prematurely, the huge pile of wood gathered for a bonfire at tonight's pep meeting. Students, however, fought valiantly to salvage some of it and tonight the towering nest of old lumber, boxes, signs and barrels was set off with appropriate ceremonies after President Harry Woodburn Chase, Coach Bob Zuppke, Director of Athletics George Huff, and Harold Pogue, star of the 1914 and 1915 teams, had addressed the students and alumni.

The hope hasn't grown into overconfidence, or even a plain everyday variety of confidence, but the hope is there and it has spread even to the football team. Zuppke admitted today that the team itself feels it can beat Northwestern if it plays the kind of football of which it is capable and he considers that a long step forward in the rehabilitation of the Illini football fortunes after the complete demoralization which marked the close of the season of 1931.

Zuppke Apprehensive.

Illinois' team has improved over that of 1931. That is apparent from the large number of last year's players who are still on the squad, but who have surrendered their places to sophomores.

The line which starts tomorrow's game will be made up of at least five and possibly six men playing their first conference game. If Ack Bodman, a senior, is able to start at his old guard position, he with Ivan Schustek, a reserve end last year, will give the Illini two veterans. If he doesn't play Bob Hladik, the sixth sophomore, will step into the breach and Illinois will line up at the kickoff with a sophomore line from left end through right tackle. Fred Frink, a good end in 1931, is out of the game because of a torn ligament.

The Backs! Ah, the Backs!

In the back field Zuppke has more seasoned material to pick from. At quarter back he will start Capt. Gil Berry, originally a half back, with Pete Yanuskus and Dave Cook at halves. Yanuskus played in 1929 and 1930, but was out last year. Cook is a junior who is showing some of the ability which he displayed in early season games of last year before he was disabled by a charley horse. He has been handicapped to some extent this year by a knee injury suffered in the Miami game two weeks ago, but probably will be able to play against the Purple.

Herman Walser, a letter man in 1931, will start at full back, with Edwin Snavely, another letter man, and Zeke Seamons, a sophomore, in reserve. Both Snavely and Walser are small and slow, with none of the physical attributes of a good line plunger, but they have the advantage of experience, which Seamons lacks.

Illinois doesn't know much about Northwestern. The coaches are cer-

HAIRPIN CURVES WILL BEAT STARS IF PLATERS WON'T

Panchio and Miss Marr Lose at Sportsman's.

BY FRENCH LANE.

The first good horse to lose to a celebrated half mile track performer was Panchio, winner of a Louisiana Derby and third in a Kentucky Derby. Polly's Folly, a cheap rascal from the half mile circuits, hung it all over him—hung it on him so badly that he was completely out of the money.

The second major track star failure was Miss Marr and she also did a good job of getting trimmed for she too was out of the money. The half-mile sprint champion Diaquri hugged the rail and ran so fast that it was hardly a contest. Outbound landed second money and Very Well was third.

10,000 Pack Stands.

With Indian summer weather offering agreeable conditions a crowd of 10,000 jammed its way into the tiny half mile course. It was the first time during the fall racing that the half mile track had a chance to prove its popularity. It was the first time since the season opened last Monday that the sun shone and good track conditions prevailed.

Most of the spectators seemed to have come to the track to wager on Panchio and Miss Marr, both of which are owned by Mrs. Emil Denemark. They backed each so stoutly they became red hot favorites. Consequently the triumphs of the half mile champions didn't cheer up the gathering.

Panchio and Miss Marr, the latter wearing four heavy bandages, were never contenders. They were beaten right from the opening gun. The half milers who knew how to skim around the sharp turns ran rings around them right from the beginning.

Sharp Turns Do Trick.

Nusakan and Mill Hand finished back of Polly's Folly in second and third position. Panchio never worked himself into a real running mood. Maybe the sharp turns of the half mile track frightened him.

Miss Marr started from an extreme outside post position. She had no excuses except that the half mile champ Diaquri outran her to the clubhouse bend, then hugged the rail while Miss Marr lost many lengths endeavoring to negotiate the turn. Outbound was always close to the leader and had no trouble finishing second. When Miss Marr went wider still on the last turn Very Well sneaked through on the rail to beat her out of the show money.

LAKE FOREST MEETS NORMAL; BOTH UNBEATEN

Bloomington, Ill., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—Lake Forest and State Normal will be fighting to retain their place among the undefeated teams of the Little 19 conference when they meet here tomorrow.

An injury to Omar Ward, 190 pound end, caused Coach Hancock of State to shift Bill Bennington, a blocking half back, to a wing position today. Capt. Brummitt, full back, also is ailing, and Paul Frye, a freshman from Akron, O., probably will get the call tomorrow.

The starting lineup against Lake Forest will consist of Sleevar and Rutledge, ends; Kuhfuss and Thomas, tackles; Meyers and Drum, guards; Dennis, center; Murray, quarter back; Niel and Cutter, halves; Frye, full back.

ASSOCIATION TO HOLD ANNUAL MEETING OCT. 22

President Thomas J. Hickey of the American association yesterday announced that the annual meeting will be held at the Congress hotel on Oct. 22. According to current report, the meeting will be one of the most important in history.

Reduced players' salaries and admission prices and the adoption of a 154 game schedule are expected to be put into effect. Teams in the league have played 168 games in recent seasons.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Notre Dame, Ind., Oct. 14.—The debris resulting from Notre Dame's 73 to 0 massacre of the Haskell Indians last week finally has been cleared away, and, except for a few stray feathers and moccasins, the big stadium here was generally tidied up this afternoon when thirty earnest Bulldogs from Drake university trotted into it to warm up for their seventh and last annual game with the Irish tomorrow.

A crowd of about 20,000, of whom 5,000 Boy Scouts and Campfire girls, will be guests of the University Athletic association, is expected to attend, with those who witnessed last Saturday's carnage hoping that such brutality shall not be inflicted on a team which has proven itself one of Notre Dame's best opponents in their short series of meetings.

Whatever fate may be in store for the boys from Des Moines—and it is no state secret in these parts that they cannot hope to measure up to the power and speed which appears to be concentrated in the South Bend eleven once more—Drake can be expected on past performances to demonstrate that its nickname is not ill given, and the Irish coaches are well aware of the fact.

Irish Sweep the Series.

Notre Dame has won all of their six previous meetings, in 1926 by 21 to 0, in 1927 by 32 to 0, in 1928 by 32 to 6, in 1929 by 19 to 7, in 1930 by 27 to 7, and last year by 63 to 0. That 1929 game is the one Notre Dame remembers. It was played at Soldiers' field in Chicago, and at the end of the first half it appeared that there might be a high old time back in Des Moines, for the Bulldogs were leading, 7 to 6. The Irish first team finally was called upon, but could deliver no more than two touchdowns during the second half.

Speaking of scores, there was an unkind if inadvertent reminder of what the morrow may hold for them when the Bulldogs came into the stadium for their practice today. The scoreboard at the end of the big bowl had not been completely changed from last week's game, through some error, and they went through their workout stealing glances at these ominous figures: Notre Dame, 73; Drake, 0.

Host Team Takes It Easy.

The Irish followed them on the field, but indulged in only light exercise, following the schedule to which Coach Hunk Anderson has adhered these last few weeks, gentling them along for their first important game next Saturday.

Anderson will start the second team tomorrow, but the first string eleven will play the greater part of the game, with a few chores thrown in for the third team. The starting lineup will include two new members, who, through their work in the Haskell game and subsequent workouts, have been promoted to the second team. One of these is Dominic Vario, who hails from Calumet, Mich., the home town of Anderson and the late George Gipp. Vario has displaced Sturla Canale of Memphis, Tenn., at left end. The other newcomer is Dick Pfefferle of Appleton, Wis., who beat out Mike Leding of South Bend for the left tackle job.

And Here's the Varsity.

The varsity eleven, which is expected to appear in the game includes: Capt. Paul Host and Ed Kosky, ends; Ed Krause and Joe Kurth, tackles; Jim Harris and Norm Greeney, guards; Ben Alexander, of San Marino, Cal., who displaced Kitty Gorman at center; Chuck Laskwhich, quarter; Nick Lukats and Ray Brancheu, half backs, and George Melinkovich, full back.

Coach Evan [Bill] Williams, who took up where Ossie Solem left off at Drake, will send forth approximately the same lineup which worked in the team's first two games, in which it defeated Simpson and lost to Oklahoma Aggies.

DE PAUL FORCED TO USE RESERVES AGAINST RIPON

De Paul university's football team will be forced to draw heavily on reserve strength for its Ripon game today at Loyola stadium. Six regulars are in a more or less crippled condition.

As a result, Norman Mertes will start at one of the guard positions, Bill Clancy will appear at tackle, Fred Brainard will start at end, Jim Condon will be at full back, and Eddie O'Brien will play left half back.

It is doubtful whether Capt. Matty Steffen will be able to get into the contest. He has not recovered from an injury which forced him out of the Western State game last week.

Fenwick, coached by Tony Lawless, former Loyola university athlete, was admitted to the league this season and drew a bye in the opening round last week.

There will be one other Catholic league game today, De Paul meeting Weber in a north division game at De Paul field, Webster and Sheffield avenues, at 9 o'clock.

Lindblom and Englewood will meet in the outstanding contest of the eight game Chicago Public High school league schedule at Normal Park, 61st street and Racine avenue. In another central section game Tilden will play Bowen at White City at 2 o'clock.

York and Maine, reported as the strongest squads in the West Suburban league, will meet on the former's field in Elmhurst.

Illini Have Idea They Can Whip Purple

tain that it is stronger than its defeat by Michigan might indicate, but they suspect vaguely that it's not quite as good as it was last season when the Purple backs ran wild against the futile gestures of a weak Illini line. With Illinois improved to some extent and Northwestern perhaps a little weaker, it probably will be a football game tomorrow.

N. U. SQUAD ON EDGE

Northwestern's football team, confident of having generated sufficient spirit to match the Illini homecoming enthusiasm, will leave Chicago this morning for the three and one-half hour run to Champaign. The Wildcats' special train is scheduled to arrive on the siding adjacent to the Memorial stadium at 11:30.

A large delegation of students and alumni will follow the team by train and automobile. The Northwestern band of 160 pieces will leave over a special train this morning. Over 5,000 Northwestern rooters will be in the stands.

With Vincent Thoma and Chilly Sutton ready for action, the Wildcats will be able to throw their full strength against the Illini.

A change is also contemplated at left half back, where George Potter will probably start in place of Jakie Sullivan. Potter will call signals from this position, leaving the quarter back position filled by Al Kawal, a sophomore.

My Greatest Thrill in Football

BY PADDY DRISCOLL.
[As told to Charles Bartlett.]

PADDY DRISCOLL.

My greatest thrill in football? That will have to be plural, for I have had two of them I'll never forget, and I enjoyed one as much as the other. The first hit me during the first big conference game in which I ever played, the Iowa-Northwestern game at Iowa City, Ia., on Oct. 6, 1915. The second, out of which I'll admit I got a trifle more kick, came at Stagg field when we defeated the Maroons on Oct. 22, 1916.

I probably got a thrill out of that first game for the simple reason that the play in question involved one of the few times I got away with the ball, but I made up the difference in the yardage I got on that one. Iowa had stepped all over us the year before by a score of 27 to 0. However, we went out there in 1915 with a pretty fair chance of getting even. As it turned out, we lost again, but this time only by 9 to 6, the latter score starting with the play which gave me my first football thrill.

Paddy Carries Kickoff Back to Iowa's 10 Yard Line.

We got off to a poor start in the first quarter, when the Hawkeyes pushed us back to our five yard line, and Davis, their right end, kicked the first of three goals which were to win the game for his team. We lined up to take their kickoff, and I got the ball on my ten yard line. Most of my interference was spilled by the time I got past midfield, but I managed to wiggle my way to the Iowa ten yard line before a couple of Iowans caught up to me. Rose, Patterson, and myself finished the job of making the touchdown, with Patterson, who played full back on that year's team, finally taking it over to give us a lead of 6 to 3, just before the first quarter ended.

The second thrill I'll always recall came more than a year later when every Northwestern fan, and there were plenty of them in the crowd that day at Stagg field, got a real thrill for the first time in fifteen years. It was the first time during that period that Northwestern had defeated Chicago, and the score, 10 to 0, made it a decisive victory for us.

We scored in the first period when Whyte of Chicago fumbled on his own 30 yard line. I got a big kick out of taking the ball three out of five times until I made the touchdown that started us off to a 6 to 0 lead. Putnam, our right tackle, made it 7 to 0 by kicking successfully for the extra point.

43 Yards! That's a Long Ways, but Paddy Did It.

As the game went on that 7 to 0 looked pretty big, but the Maroons, who outweighed us 15 pounds to the man in the line, were pressing all the time, and we stood them off several times when they were on the verge of a touchdown in the second and third periods.

We kept pushing the Maroons farther and farther back in the last quarter, but couldn't bring the ball close enough to negotiate a score. We felt that 7 to 0 wasn't big enough yet, and finally decided on a try for field goal. I stood on the Chicago 43 yard line when I took the pass from center. Forty-three yards is a long, long way on a football field, especially when you haven't tried a kick at that distance before. It went straight for the goal posts, but at first it looked as though it wasn't going to be high enough to get over the cross bar. It did, however, but just about a yard, putting the game on ice for us, 10 to 0.

A third of that crowd out there, all of them rooting for Northwestern, went wild for a couple of minutes, but they couldn't have felt any better than I did when that ball sailed across the bar.

John Leo [Paddy] Driscoll became famous in football circles in the years before the war as the player who, although never weighing much more than 145 pounds, ran, kicked, and passed with such skill that he brought Northwestern out of the football doldrums. He continued in 1918 as a star of the famous Great Lakes team. He received a trial as an outfielder with the Cubs, and went on to shine for several leading semi-pro teams. In recent years, as athletic director of St. Mel's High school, he has put the west siders on the Chicago prep map. He coached St. Mel's basketball team to a national championship in 1925. He also was the offensive nucleus of both of Chicago's professional teams, the Bears and the Cardinals, for years.

BEARS, PACKERS PLAY FOR LEAGUE LEAD TOMORROW

The Bears and Green Bay Packers clash on Wrigley field tomorrow in a game that will decide first place in the National professional football league. Comparative scores make the Bears the under dogs. However, in the first game between the two at Green Bay this season, the Bears had a little the best of a hard fought scoreless tie.

As a result of that game feeling is running high in the Bear camp. This coupled with the natural rivalry of the teams and the fact that the Packers more than any other team has prevented the Bears from winning the title, has the north sider team worked up to a high pitch.

Grange Is Out.

The Bears will be without the services of Capt. Red Grange, who will be replaced by Johnny Sisk, former Marquette university star, and George Corbett of Millikin, two Bear cubs. Nagurski will be acting captain until Grange returns, which may be the latter part of next week. No muscles were torn, it has developed, when his shoulder was dislocated early in the Cardinal game last Sunday.

Only two men who played in the first game between the Bears and Packers in 1921 will be on the teams tomorrow. They are George Trafton, Bear center, and Jugger Earpe, the 257 pound Packer tackle. In contrast to these two veterans a few men just beginning their big league careers have been named to start by Coaches Jones of the Bears and Curly Lambeau of Green Bay who is in his 14th year as coach of the Wisconsin eleven. Engebretsen, Miller and Hewitt, Big Ten stars last year at Northwestern, Purdue and Michigan, respectively, will be in the line for the Bears, while Bultman will be in the line for Green Bay.

Hinkle Makes Good.

In reserve Lambeau has Clark Hinkle, full back, and Joe Zeller, guard, both playing their first year of professional ball. The former comes from Bucknell and the latter from Indiana, where they were captains. Hinkle promises to take the place of the nine-year veteran Lewellen as the team's punter. Lewellen, one of the lightest backs in the game, will go down in the book as one of the all-time greats in the league. His kicking alone has been the biggest single contribution to the Packers' success in the last six years.

Dick Nesbitt of the Bears appears to be the only player who has a chance to equal Lewellen's punting record. For tomorrow's game Coach Jones has shifted Paul Franklin, formerly a full back, from end to half back. Ely will play at right instead of left tackle with Burdick at right tackle. Buckler will be used at right tackle instead of right guard and Joe Kopcha, who after two trials with the Bears seems to have arrived, will start at right guard.

The kickoff will be made at 2:15.

DEMPSEY HELPS BURY DE FOREST, HIS OLD TRAINER

Long Branch, N. J., Oct. 14.—(AP)—Jimmy De Forest, trainer of ring champions, was buried today in the presence of only a few of pugilism's faithful.

Jack Dempsey was there to pay his last respects to the man who groomed him for his spectacular triumph over Jess Willard under the boiling sun in Toledo thirteen years ago. He was one of the pallbearers.

Army Tackles Pitt on Plains Today Before 27,000

frivolity such as football practice until it was almost dark. They returned to the post, some of them in trucks, others on the hoof, about the time that Pitt's practice ended, reported to the gymnasium for their equipment, consisting of sweat suits, and gathered on the football field behind heavy canvas curtains to run through light practice under the lights which were mounted on poles in reflectors as big as bath tubs.

Sasse's Last Crack.

Maj. Ralph Sasse was still in charge as head coach and Gar Davidson, the second lieutenant who will relieve him next fall, still devoted himself to the plebes on another section of the lot. There seemed to be no emotional reaction to the news of Sasse's impending departure from the Point, but you could hardly expect the cadets to go around screaming and chewing their handkerchiefs about it, especially as the news had been in the wind for a long time and was only confirmed by the announcement the other day.

The athletes may play a little more desperately against Pitt, knowing officially that Sasse is in his last season, because he has been a friendly and inspiring coach to the kids. But they always play a headlong, all-for-the-corps sort of football and they are a pretty desperate lot when they are just doing their routine. Pitt beat the Army last year, 26 to 0. The memory of that licking which was something on the order of a humiliation for an Army team, unaccustomed as they are to emphatic lickings, may give a special quality to the desperation.

Coach Gets $45 Weekly.

Lieut. Davidson, when he takes charge of the squad next year, will be about the last man in the financial ranking of the coaches of major American football teams. His pay, which is no secret because army officers wear their salary figures in their insignia of rank, is $160 a month, plus $18 a month for his food. He did get a little more pay than that until a while back when congress decided that the officers would have to take two compulsory days off, without pay, every month.

The American Coaches' union may wish to take steps against Gar Davidson for queering a good racket by coaching one of the big teams of the country for about $45 a week. The job ought to be worth $50.

Ed Herb, the Army's first string quarter back, is off the squad for the time being with a broken bone in his left ankle and will be relieved at the start of the game by either Pick Vidal, a converted half back and brother of the famous Gene Vidal, who was one of the Army's great pre-war backs, or Joe McWilliam, who played last year. Otherwise the Army regulars, such as they are, which is short of the Army standard, are in good health and fit for service.

Pitt Without Stars.

The Pitt people announce that they will be lacking two or those individuals who are described as towers of strength, Paul Reider, the captain and right half back, and Joe Tormey, the varsity center. Mike Sebastian will take the place of Reider and a sophomore named Shotwell will play center, but I always feel that it is idle nonsense to discuss such matters on the eve of a game because miraculous overnight recoveries are common in football and anyway the substitutes often play better than their principals.

There can't be more than 27,000 customers at this game tomorrow because that is all the stadium will hold.

In the recent past bruising early season clashes with Notre Dame frequently have upset Indiana's physical equipment. This year the Hoosiers did not meet their neighbors from upstate. Indiana promises to use a passing attack extensively, with Fitz Lyons and Jesse Babb, the two able "ho-de-hi" boys, performing prominent rôles.

Iowa Has a Defense.

The Opasik-Lyons' pass combination has been clicking perfectly. Iowa is said to have worked out a defense for the star Indiana pair, but Gene and Fitz are confident the Hawks can be fooled by some of the slick stuff they have evolved.

The Iowa squad arrived here today, but did not linger long, going right on to Bedford, which is down the pike a piece from here. The Hawks will stay in Bedford until noon tomorow.

Indiana's homecoming ceremonies opened with the annual powwow on the campus. This is a gay halloweenish pageant and this year is made a little more spectacular, if not more interesting, by the presence of political candidates who stand by eager to spring into oratory in case a lull develops in the entertainment committee's program.

Among those who are here, satchels packed with flares and campaign literature, is the Hon. James E. Watson, senate Republican leader. The senator is not an alumnus of I. U., but the situation is such in Monroe county that the statesman thought it well to be on hand for a little well timed cheering.

MAROONS BATTLE KNOX TODAY IN FINAL WARMUP

Expect Easy Triumph Over Downstate Foe.

Coach Stagg's 41st team of Maroons will go into their final practice game of the season against Knox college this afternoon, fired with a new necessity—that of doing well by a football season which may be the last for their coach.

Defeated twice in its two starts in the Little Nineteen so far this season, Knox is not expected to be a serious menace to Chicago in this afternoon's encounter, which begins at 2 o'clock on Stagg field. Knox lost to Western State, 6 to 0, and to Augustana, 27 to 6.

Only One Casualty.

The Maroons are in the best shape of the season, the single exception being Bart Smith, sophomore end, who is out of the play with a cracked leg bone.

The Galesburg team has improved this week through the recovery of several ailing men and the switching of Jerry Paul from end to full back. Chester Wellman, an exceptional kicker, is expected to stave off the Chicago attack to some extent.

If the team is not pressed, Coach Stagg may take the opportunity to test a number of his sophomores. The Maroons, from here in, face a schedule which has developed into one of the most strenuous in the Big Ten, with Indiana, Illinois, Purdue, Michigan and Wisconsin to be met in succession.

Knox is expected to depend heavily on an aerial attack. The Siwash varsity eleven was considerably heartened in its final scrimmage last Wednesday by running through the freshmen for eight touchdowns.

Zimmer to Lead Attack.

The largest deputation of students in Knox history has accompanied the squad, which arrived in Chicago yesterday for a workout on Stagg field.

A feature of today's game will be the first public appearance of the Maroon freshman players, highly regarded on the Midway, who will stage a short battle between halves of the varsity match.

723 QUALIFY IN FIRST WEEK FOR C. Y. O. BOXING

A record breaking total of 723 amateur boxers had qualified last night at the completion of the first week's preliminaries for the Catholic Youth Organization boxing tournament, which opens Oct. 27 at the C. Y. O. athletic center. Lack of ring experience and failure to pass the required medical tests caused the rejection of 127 boys.

When last night's card was concluded, 87 more boys had been accepted for the tournament. The qualifying bouts will continue throughout next week. Registrations, however, will close Monday night.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 14.—The bond market benefited today from a sudden reversal of sentiment, advancing a point or more throughout the list as the professional trading element switched commitments to the constructive side of the market.

Gains were largest in the volatile railroad bonds, such as issues of Baltimore and Ohio, which ran up as much as 3 points in certain issues.

Sudden spurt by buying was attributed generally to the belief that car loadings will show further expansion and that other business factors, recently favorable, will continue on an up trend.

Like Short Term Issues.

From an investment angle, demand for high quality, early maturing issues was pronounced. This was evident both in the short term United States government market and in some of the short dated public utility and other corporation bonds.

Bond traders who for some time have watcher the quick flux of sentiment toward speculative bonds attached no especial significance to the strength of the speculative market today. It was pointed out that this portion of the market is in the hands of the professional element in Wall street and that buying may result from transient influences.

Banks Buying Bonds.

Demand for early maturing bonds, according to the view of some traders, might be tied in with the cut in bill rates and with an increasing disposition of banks to make commitments in corporation securities of the gilt-edge class.

The firmness today in short term treasury obligations was regarded as unmistakable proof that these issues were more attractive in the light of the new rates on call loans.

Foreign bonds dropped somewhat from speculative favor today, leading to the inference that yesterday's extreme strength and activity in Germans and certain other foreign bonds was but another flareup in a sensitive market, traceable to no new development of fresh significance.

Twin City Rapid Transit.

In common with other local transit companies revenues have been adversely affected by depressed trade conditions and competition of privately owned automobiles. Revenue passengers carried in 1931 numbered 130,891,000, which was about 107,000,000 less than the number carried in 1920.

Gross revenues in the first half of 1932 were $5,042,000, against $5,707,000 in the corresponding 1931 period. Net income after all charges was $251,000, against $334,000 in the first half of 1931.

Total operating revenues in 1931 were $10,631,000, against $12,324,000 in 1930 and $13,488,000 in 1929. Fixed charges were earned 1.82 times in 1931, 1.94 times in 1930 and 2.03 times in 1929. Bond interest was covered 1.69 times in 1928.

On Dec. 31, 1931, current assets were $2,723,000 and current liabilities were $1,009,000. Cash alone was $1,850,000. Working capital was $1,713,000. On Dec. 31, 1930, current liabilities were $167,000 more than current assets.

Taxes have been reduced about $480,000 a year since 1929. The company has been discontinuing branches which have operated at a loss and has extended the use of one-man cars. The results of these actions have served to offset in some degree reduced revenues.

The company retired $152,000 of bonds due April 1, 1932, out of current assets. The remaining early maturing funded debt includes $60,000 notes due 1936, $161,000 6s, due 1934, and $3,708,000 5s due Jan. 15, 1937.

The $17,914,000 5½s, due 1952, are secured by pledge of $18,000,000 Minneapolis Street Railway company first mortgage bonds and St. Paul City Railway bonds. Sinking fund requirements are $360,000 a year.

They are somewhat speculative.

No Magic Formula.

There is no formula that we know of to determine accurately what the fair price of any particular stock is. In purchasing stock you are purchasing equity—you participate in the benefits of past performances of the company and commit yourself to participation in future results. Neither we nor any one else can accurately determine what success any company will have in the future, nor to what degree specific results will affect the price of the stock.

A. T. & T. EARNS $5.92 A SHARE IN NINE MONTHS

Third Quarter Net Is $35,442,278.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

American Telephone and Telegraph company, the nation's largest corporation, earned $110,541,623 in the nine months ended Sept. 30, according to the report released last night.

WALTER S. GIFFORD.

This profit was equal to $5.92 per share on the outstanding stock. Dividends paid during the first three quarters totaled $6.75 per share. The company's deficit for the first nine months, therefore, amounted to $15,422,862, or approximately 83 cents per share.

In the first nine months of 1931 American Telephone had earned $128,529,560, or $7.01 per share and, after paying dividends, had a surplus of $6,882,671.

Gifford Holds Hope.

In the third quarter alone earnings were $35,442,278, equal to $1.90 per share, compared with earnings of $2.12 per share in the third quarter of 1931.

The company's third quarter results were well received in stock market circles yesterday. The stock gained 6⅝ points for the day, closing at 106.

Walter S. Gifford, president, in his letter to stockholders offered the encouraging news that the rate of telephone disconnections had been slowing up considerably during the third quarter.

"There has been a gradual increase in new telephones connected and a slowing up of telephones disconnected during recent weeks," Mr. Gifford said.

Ten Per Cent Fewer Phones.

"There was a net loss for September of 90,000 telephones, which is materially below that for any month since April and about one-third of the net loss of 268,000 for July.

"The 14,020,000 Bell owned telephones now in service are about 10 per cent below the maximum development, a point reached in 1930."

Long distance calls during the first three quarters of 1932, Mr. Gifford said, were about 20 per cent less than for the corresponding period last year. He reported, however, that long distance business during the last few weeks had been showing "somewhat more than seasonal improvement."

"While the company shows earnings of $5.92 per share in the first nine months of 1932," his letter stated, "dividends of $103,414,238 received from associated companies were not fully earned by those companies during the nine months by about $18,000,000.

No Dividends from Subsidiary.

No dividends have been received this year from the Western Electric company. In the first six months of 1931 $10,325,862 was received from that source.

Western Electric company, Mr. Gifford said, is operating at less than 20 per cent of capacity, with an estimated net loss of $8,000,000 for the first nine months of this year.

No balance sheet accompanied the report given out by the company last night. The company's cash position, however, is excellent. Dividends could be maintained at the present rate of $9 annually without cutting deeply into cash assets. The company's present cash outlays for construction are extremely limited. No mention was made in the report concerning the future dividend policy.

RAILROAD WINS FIRST FIGHT TO GIVE STEEL MILLS WATER FREIGHT

Beaver, Pa., Oct. 14.—(AP)—The Montour railroad today won its first legal battle in the construction of a thirteen mile railroad from Youngstown, O., to the Ohio river to furnish the Mahoning valley steel district with a water transportation outlet.

The Beaver county Common Pleas court rejected a petition by the Cleveland and Pittsburgh railroad, a subsidiary of the Pennsylvania railroad, for an injunction to prevent the Montour from using a highway in Ohio township as part of its right of way.

Ohio township supervisors agreed to abandon the road, leading through a rocky hillside near here, in return for a new highway to be built by the Pittsburgh Coal company, owner of the Montour.

The new Montour railroad, to extend from Negley, O., to the Ohio river at Smith's Ferry, Pa., will save $2,500,000 annually in freight charges, Youngstown steel men have estimated. Construction of the line already has been started.

Coal Passes Water Power in Efficiency

BY SCRUTATOR.

The federal government has expended and is spending vast sums on water power development. There are Muscle Shoals in the south and Boulder dam in the far west, together representing an investment of around 220 million dollars. Then, too, there is the projected St. Lawrence river development in partnership with Canada.

It is increasingly apparent, however, that the chief industrial sections of the United States will continue to rely on power produced from fuel. Steady progress in recent years has reduced the cost of producing electrical energy by steam plants to a point where the great central stations can produce power in competition with hydro-electric plants. Moreover, engineers say steam plants have not reached the practical limit of efficiency, whereas hydro-electric plants have closely approached their zenith.

Supply Far from Demand.

The great industrial section of the United States lies east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio river. Here the bulk of power is used. But the largest sources of water power are in the northwest and Pacific coast regions and in the southeast. According to the geological survey, about 70 per cent of the potential water power resources of the country lies in the far west, while about 80 per cent of the demand for electric power is east of the Mississippi river.

The tremendous reduction in cost of generating electric power by steam plants is shown by data collected by the National Electric Light association. When the central stations were first developed about forty years ago between 15 and 20 pounds of coal were used to produce a kilowatt hour of electricity. But boilers have been improved, steam turbines have been adopted and great generators built. Now such units have a capacity exceeding 200,000 kilowatt hours. The largest and most efficient plants consume less than one pound of coal per kilowatt hour produced.

Steam Plants Gain Most.

This striking decline in costs, coupled with the fact that most of the efficient water power plants are far removed from the great power consuming districts, has resulted in larger actual and relative growth of steam than hydro-electric plants. Output of fuel plants increased from about 27½ billion kilowatt hours in 1920 to nearly 63 billion kilowatt hours in 1930, whereas in the same period the hydro-electric output increased from a little more than 16 billion to nearly 33 billion kilowatt hours.

"The efficiency of modern steam turbines and boilers has increased to such a point that in many cases the total cost of generating steam power is less than the cost of making water power developments," the association finds. "Great steam generating stations have even been constructed immediately adjacent to great water powers, such as at Buffalo, next to Niagara Falls. The present high efficiency of steam generating stations and the locations of the great density of power requirements in regions where water power is not available will cause the majority of future electricity requirements to be generated by steam."

Steam Most Profitable.

Studies made by the bureau of business research of the University of Illinois show that between 1920 and 1926 the capital invested in fuel-electric plants was more productive of revenues than that invested in hydro-electric plants. Gross revenue of steam plants averaged 23 cents for each dollar invested and 6.6 cents was earned before fixed charges, whereas gross revenue was 11 cents per dollar for hydro-electric plants and 5.3 cents was earned.

Economical generation of power and increasing use have resulted in declining rates, with the result that the commercial users, who consume nearly 85 per cent of all electric power, find the cost of power representing a relatively small part of their total costs. In fact, data of the census bureau show that the total cost of all power and fuel used in manufacturing, even including fuel used for heat, is only about 3 per cent of the total value of products.

GRIGSBY-GRUNOW REPORTS LOSS FOR SIX MONTHS

The Grigsby-Grunow company yesterday reported that its net loss was $1,056,026 in the six months ended June 30. This includes the operations of the Columbia Phonograph company which was acquired in January. Comparable figures for the same period of 1931 are not available. In the seven months ended Dec. 31, 1931, the concern had a deficit of $2,901,305.

Net sales of the company were $6,481,413 for the six months period. Gross profit on sales was $311,834. The portion of the loss applicable to Columbia Phonograph was $12,060.

The company's balance sheet as of June 30 shows current assets of $4,692,881, including cash of $1,312,866, as compared with current liabilities of $1,012,808. Inventories stood at $1,863,915. Notes payable total $90,200 and funded debt now totals $2,588,100.

S. O. of Indiana Is Assailed for Stand on Price

Tulsa, Okla., Oct. 14.—(AP)—A statement by the Standard Oil Company of Indiana announcing its position against an increase in crude oil prices at this time drew criticism from leaders of the midcontinent petroleum industry tonight.

Declining to meet the increases of 9 to 12 cents which push the top price to $1.12 per barrel tomorrow, the company said in a statement issued in Chicago "conditions do not warrant even the present prices."

E. B. Reeser, president of Barnsdall Oil corporation and former head of the American Petroleum institute, said in answer that midcontinent refineries are running at 50 per cent or less of capacity.

Carl Estes, Tyler, Tex., publisher and a leading of independent elements in the oil industry, said "it is emphatically denied and official statistics support the denial that crude oil is now being produced in excess of demand," as charged by Standard.

Asserts Illegal Run Halted.

"At the present time," he said, "the Standard of Indiana is the only important oil company that is in opposition to a measure that is universally believed to be vital to the salvation of the oil industry."

He said illegal running of oil had been checked.

Executives of the Carter Oil company, subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, while refusing direct quotation, said their company was in much the same position as the Indiana Standard.

While these two companies, which purchase at least half the crude oil produced in the midcontinent area, were withholding any advance, virtually every other company of consequence operating in the midcontinent had announced it would pay increased prices beginning at 7 a. m. tomorrow.

EXPLAIN STAND ON PRICE.

In explaining its refusal to join the movement, Standard of Indiana pointed out that gasoline consumption is faling off and that retail price cutting is spreading.

"Everybody in the industry knows," the company's statement said, "that with consumption of gasoline falling off enormously, price cutting is rampant throughout the oil business. Although producers are making commendable efforts to control their production, crude is still being produced in excess of demand. Some of it is being run illegally and sold at prices that jeopardize the posted price structure.

"Refineries are manufacturing more gasoline than is needed. Many are dumping at cut prices. Aided by rising taxes, tax evaders are wrecking retail markets wherever they operate. There is also much retail price cutting by reputable marketers who are striving to hold volume of sales regardless of profits.

"Delays Permanent Recovery."

"The Indiana company is sincerely desirous of seeing producers receive a satisfactory price for crude. But it is convinced that an advance in the face of present conditions will simply provide leeway for further abuses and delay progress toward permanent recovery in the oil industry."

A correction of fundamental conditions is necessary before any real improvement can take place in the opinion of the company's officials. They believe that fundamental conditions will eventually influence prices anyway, although they are temporarily overlooked in the eagerness for better returns.

The company's statement implied that officials feel that further curtailment in production of crude oil is necessary before prices of crude and the finished products can register a real advance.

Withdraw Receivers' Suit Against Waldorf-Astoria

New York, Oct. 14.—(AP)—Bernard Breslauer's request that a receiver be appointed for the Waldorf-Astoria hotel was withdrawn without explanation today in Supreme court. Breslauer, who applied for the receivership as the holder of two $1,000 bonds in the hotel's $13,000,000 mortgage bond issue, had objected to a plan by which the hotel operators deferred payments of interest and amortization.

DUKE OF ABRUZZI FINDS SHIP BUSINESS NO BED OF ROSES; RESIGNS POST

GENOA, Oct. 14.—(AP)—The duke of Abruzzi submitted his resignation today as president of the Italia line, into which Italian steamship companies serving both North and South America recently were combined. He gave as his reason his inability to bring about harmony among executives of companies that used to be competitive.

Two directors also submitted their resignations. These are the Marquis Della Penne, former head of the Lloyd Sabaudo line, and Domenico Brunelli, former head of the Navigazione Generale.

It was reported in marine circles that two other directors wished to withdraw. They are Senator Vittorio Rolando-Ricci, former ambassador to the United States, and the Marquis Giuseppe Salvatore Raggi.

Senator Rolando-Ricci is understood to have told Premier Mussolini in offering his resignation that he was 73 years old, and the premier replied that he could not accept the decision to retire because the senator had the spirit of a man of 37.

CANADIAN DOLLAR AT 91 3-8 REACHES NEW YEAR'S HIGH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 14. — The Canadian dollar reached a new high for the year in American exchange today. It closed at New York at 91⅜. The discount of 8⅝ cents was less than half what it was several months ago, the discount being 18 per cent at one time.

Canadian circles were cheered by the improved showing of the dollar, and recent forecasts that it was destined for par within a few months were recalled.

Heavy export shipments of wheat, the heaviest volume of the year to date, are a major reason for the improvement in the dollar. Last week's wheat shipments from Canada totaled 7,929,975 bushels, best weekly total since 1929. United States wheat exports were only 870,000 bushels last week.

This new automobile marks the culmination of more than two years of study and research along engineering, production, and market lines. It also represents extraordinary expenditures and investment for a year like this."

Expect Rail Credit Plan to Be Continued

Chicago was a mecca for railroad presidents yesterday with the holding of two important meetings at the Blackstone hotel. One was a meeting of the advisory committee of the Association of Railway Executives. The other was that of the board of directors of the American Railway association. Many of the executives here serve on both groups.

Ostensibly the fate of the Railroad Credit corporation was one of the subjects discussed at the first named conference. Under the terms of the corporation's constitution, the obligations imposed on the roads subscribing to it are not effective after March 1 unless its life is extended. However, one railroad president stated recently that the activities of the corporation have been so successful there is little chance of its being discontinued.

Not Up to Hopes.

This president said that while the revenues derived by the corporation from surcharges on freight put into effect last January have no where near come up to hopes, the money received has been put to the best of use in improving the credit of roads needing financial assistance.

Other subjects touched on by the advisory committee of the executives were the proposal for railroad representation at the senate's hearing on the St. Lawrence waterway, taxation, and trucks.

None of the actions taken by the committee are binding and must be submitted to the association of executives as a whole.

The schedule for the board of directors of the American Railway association covered purely technical items, such as car exchanges, problems of operation and the like.

Those at Meetings.

Those attending the two meetings included the following: R. H. Aishton, W. W. Atterbury, president, Pennsylvania; Elisha Lee, vice president, Pennsylvania; L. W. Baldwin, president, Missouri Pacific; J. J. Bernet, president, Chesapeake and Ohio and Pere Marquette; W. R. Cole, president, Louisville and Nashville; L. A. Downs, president, Illinois Central; Carl R. Gray, president, Union Pacific; J. J. Pelley, president, New Haven; Alfred P. Thom, general counsel, Association of Railway Executives; J. E. Gorman, president, Rock Island; H. A. Scandrett, president, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific; E. G. Buckland, chairman of the board, New Haven; Charles Donnelly, president, Northern Pacific; W. B. Storey, president, Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé; Paul Shoup, vice chairman, Southern Pacific.

Others present were: A. C. Needles, president, Norfolk and Western; J. M. Davis, president, Lackwanna; J. T. Loree, son of L. F. Loree and vice president and general manager of Delaware and Hudson; Herbert Fitzpatrick, general counsel, Chesapeake and Ohio; R. B. White, president, Jersey Central; C. W. Galloway, vice president, Baltimore and Ohio.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 14.—The percentage decline in sales of Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea company for the four weeks ended Oct. 1 from last year reflected an improved trend when compared with the decrease for the previous five week period, according to the company's report issued today. The drop for the latest period was 14.11 per cent, against 15.6 for the five weeks ended Sept. 3.

Results for the twenty-nine weeks ended Oct. 1 continued at approximately the same percentage under the corresponding interval of 1931 as the decline of slightly more than 14 per cent shown in the previous report covering twenty-five weeks.

U. S. HOME LOAN BANK HERE WILL BE OPEN TODAY

But Not for Business Until Oct. 22.

BY AL CHASE.

Directors of the Evanston Home Loan bank last night decided not to open the new federal institution to the general public until next Saturday, Oct. 22. At 10 a. m. on that date, in a location yet to be selected, the Federal Home Loan bank's branch, serving Illinois and Wisconsin, will begin serving the public.

Complying with orders from Washington, the bank will start functioning today in temporary quarters in the North Shore hotel, Evanston, but it will not be open to the public. During the next week the time will be spent in organization work, getting the personnel established, preparing printed forms and other detail matters.

All Preliminary Steps Taken.

This was announced last night by Henry G. Zander, vice chairman and one of the eleven directors of the Evanston Home Loan bank, following an all day series of conferences, a lunch tendered the board by the Evanston Chamber of Commerce, and an all evening session at the North Shore hotel.

"We're now formally organized," said Mr. Zander. "The charter is signed and all preliminary steps have been taken. Although we'll open tomorrow morning, as has been announced for some weeks, it'll be merely for organization work. The opening for the public will be on Saturday morning, Oct. 22.

"We have four or five locations under consideration but haven't selected one yet, so we can't announce the exact location for a few days."

A. R. Gardner in Charge.

The new federal branch bank will be in active charge of A. R. Gardner of Olympia, Wash., who has been appointed manager of the Evanston institution. He is officially known as executive vice president. August F Backus of Milwaukee is president.

S. R. Phillips, Danville, Ill., is chairman of the board of directors. The other directors, in addition to Mr. Zander and Mr. Backus, are: Alfred McArthur, president of the Central Life Insurance company; A. G. Erdman, secretary of the Bell Savings, Building and Loan association, Chicago; John A. Sierocinski, Good Shepherd Building and Loan association, Chicago; Maurice E. Vasen, Quincy; Ward B Whitlock, Springfield; Paul Stark, Madison, Wis.; Fred W. Hermans, Kenosha, Wis., and B. F. Kuehlhorn, Milwaukee, Wis.

At yesterday's luncheon at the North Shore hotel Vice Chairman Zander pointed out that the new bank already was swamped with applications for jobs and for loans. He called attention to the fact, usually overlooked, that the discounting of mortgages will be done through existing lending institutions which have purchased stock in the Home Loan bank.

Can't Make Bad Loans.

"The sooner that is understood by the public the better for all concerned," he said. "We already have a multitude of applications for loans where the equity probably is nonexistent. We can't spend Uncle Sam's money that way."

William Best of Pittsburgh, a member of the Federal Home Loan bank board, stated that "the banks can have all the money they need for legitimate purposes, but this is not a philanthropic institution; every dollar borrowed must be repaid." He urged all eligible institutions in the Illinois-Wisconsin area to purchase stock in the home loan bank.

Other speakers at yesterday's luncheon were Morton Bodfish, Chicago member of the federal board, and President Backus.

ELEVEN OTHERS OPEN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 14.—The new 134 million dollar home loan bank system, set up under an act of congress to provide credit to home financing institutions as an aid to hard pressed home owners, will begin actual operation tomorrow morning, according to an announcement tonight by the federal home loan bank board.

Twelve of the banks have been set up by the board in various sections of the country. Each is provided with a capital ranging from 6 to 20 million dollars, the capitalization for the entire system totaling 134 millions.

What part of this amount the federal government had to supply has not been announced. It is generally believed, however, that statutory restrictions in many states preventing home financing institutions from stock investment made it necessary for the treasury to subscribe to a major portion of the home loan stock.

The home loan bank to serve Illinois and Wisconsin is located at Evanston, Ill., with a capital of 15 million dollars. The home loan board stated today that outstanding mortgages in the area to be served by the Evanston institution total $25 million dollars.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 14. — Investors in New York City bonds have lost $139,027,033 worth of value in their securities as a direct result of Tammany's machinations with Mayor Joseph V. McKee's economy plans.

When Mayor McKee stepped into office a rise in the value of city bonds began. By Sept. 12 he had announced his plans for knocking nearly one hundred million dollars from the budget and the total value of the bonds had risen to $1,409,294,082 under the stimulus of his policies. A compilation today showed the value of the city's bonds had slumped to $1,270,267,049, a decrease of more than 9 per cent.

Prices Follow Politics.

The parallel between Mayor McKee's brief career of saving and the value of the city's securities is shown by the fact that when the Tammany board of estimate sheared the mayor of his budget making power on Oct. 1 the bonds dropped a total of $47,442,851.

Surrogate John P. O'Brien was nominated on Oct. 8 and it became evident that Tammany had repudiated McKee's program. The following day the value of the city's bonds fell by an additional $50,000,000, and the drop has continued almost unchecked.

Doubt City's Credit.

Municipal bonds have always been the backing of insurance companies, savings banks and individuals who were looking for a safe investment rather than high returns. The rapid slump in values during the last weeks has shown that the investing public is doubtful about New York City's credit under its present political management.

Nothing in the record of Judge O'Brien, who will probably be mayor after Jan. 1, stamps him as an apostle of economy. He was corporation counsel for April 6, 1920, to Dec. 31, 1923. During his régime the expenses of the city's law department rose from $1,030,493 to $1,212,274—an increase of 17.6 per cent.

The personal service item in Judge O'Brien's department budget rose almost 20 per cent. It is in this item that the distribution of political patronage is revealed.

He became surrogate Jan. 1, 1923, and has held that office ever since. When he took office the surrogate's budget was $304,814. In 1932 it had risen to $462,760, which was an increase of 51.8 per cent. O'Brien shares the responsibility of this jump with one other surrogate in New York county.

CLOSED BANK PAYS 50% ON DEPOSITS IN NINE MONTHS

Elgin, Ill., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—What is considered the northern Illinois record for quick liquidation and distribution of a closed bank's assets has been established here by George W. Rue, receiver for the Home National bank, which suspended business voluntarily last Jan. 12.

Today the receiver announced a second 25 per cent depositor dividend in nine months, making a total of 50 per cent paid on general depositor and creditor claims. The bank closed with $34,786 cash on hand and liabilities of $1,528,473. Of this figure $623,374 represented deposits secured by banks, assets, rediscounts and bills payable, and this item had to be collected and distributed prior to payment of depositor and general creditor dividends. Each 25 per cent dividend totaled $181,549.

CANADA EXPORTS MORE WHEAT IN FIRST 6 MONTHS

OTTAWA, Oct. 14.—(AP)—Exports of Canadian wheat during the first six months of this fiscal year were greater in both quantity and value than during the corresponding six months of 1931-'32.

In the half year which ended Sept. 30 Canada exported 103,698,022 bushels, valued at $60,917,590. For the corresponding period last year total exports were 93,235,249 bushels, worth $55,816,555.

Total exports and imports decreased in value during the six months just ended. Canadian produce was exported to the value of $234,182,869, as compared with $295,516,898 in 1931. Imports were valued at $221,646,460, as against $318,221,727.

New York, Oct. 14.—Turning suddenly on a growing army of shorts, the stock market drove ahead today in one of the most aggressive rallies since the halt of the late summer advance early in September.

Prices were hoisted 2 to nearly 7 points, and trading was the largest in more than a week. Upward of 2,100,000 shares were dealt in.

Bear professionals were trapped in scores of so-called "vulnerable" issues and made to pay. Forced covering of this sort was particularly heavy in some twenty-five or thirty stocks in which the sharpest gains of the day were registered.

Call Market Oversold.

In the absence of any news to furnish a plausible reason for the sudden display of bullish enthusiasm brokerage opinion was forced to credit the technical condition of the market itself. Market letter writers had been warning of an "oversold condition" for several days, and brokers were generally advising customers to go cautiously on the probability of a sudden rebound. From all accounts, however, none of them expected anything like the demonstration of today.

Better prices in wheat and cotton set off the buying movement. Opening figures were only slightly above last night's closing levels, and it was not until well along toward the end of the first hour that the market began to go into action. The buying, when it did begin, gained momentum rapidly as alarmed shorts rushed to cover their commitments, and at times the ticker bumping along a full two minutes behind floor operations.

See Investment Buying.

The fact that the bear professionals had failed to break the market through last Monday's lows in yesterday's dealings made the rebound look like the "real thing" to an increasing number of tape watchers, and along with the covering orders there began to appear orders which brokers said were evidently for investment account. Cables from Europe brought further business as the news spread, and around noon the latest of the series of "bull markets" with which Wall street has endeavored to hearten business was in full hum.

The movement continued unchecked until along toward the final hour when traders who had been riding it up from the lowlands began to take their profits against the uncertainties of another day. Selling to this account continued in dribbling fashion right up to the close and shaves anywhere from a fraction to 2 points or so from the midafternoon highs of some of the more active leaders. The net gains, however, ran well into the millions and provided Wall street with a very potent antidote for the fresh spell of "blues" it has been maturing for the last month or so.

A. T. & T. Gains $6.62.

Nearly all classes of stocks shared in the improvement but the best gains were made by such issues as American Telephone, J. I. Case, Auburn, Union Pacific railroad, and other late targets of the bear offensive. Telephone at one time showed a gain of nearly nine points but it had to give toll to the profit-takers along with others toward the last. The final sale of the big utility favorite was recorded at 106, which gave it a gain of 6⅝ on the session. Case finished with a gain of 5⅝ after being higher and Auburn held nearly 5 points of its early runup.

United States Steel sold up to 39⅛ and then tapered off to 38, up 4 points while the preferred moved up 4½ on revised guesses at the corporation's preferred dividend, up for decision shortly.

Rails Rise Strongly.

The best group performance was given by the railroad shares where Union Pacific advanced 7⅞ points, Atchison 4½, Delaware and Hudson 6½, New York Central 3½, and Southern Pacific 3 points. This group has come in for some hard hammering from the bear element since the list turned down after attaining its September peaks and traders judged today that it was about as nearly sold out as any department.

Industrial and specialty issues figured largely in the larger gains, particularly a number of descriptions which have been suffering of late from reports of pool difficulties. Utilities were out in front all day and even the motors and oils which are supposed to be somewhat in seasonal eclipse just now perked up.

Say Kreuger Tampered with Accounts 15 Years Ago

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Oct. 14.—(AP)—Auditors who have examined the books of companies controlled by the late Ivar Kreuger testified today before a board of inquiry that Kreuger started 15 years ago to manipulate the accounts of the Kreuger & Toll company to give a false impression of its position.

WHEAT RISES 2c; THEN LOSES HALF OF THE INCREASE

Most of Traders Continue Bearish Sentiment.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Speculative buying of wheat futures, headed by houses with eastern connections and presumably based on the pronounced strength in stocks, lifted prices nearly 2c from the finish on Thursday, with the December touching 50c on the bulge. Shorts covered freely on the way up and sellers of offers were forced to protect themselves. There was no follow up to the buying orders, however, and profit taking caused a reaction of around 1c from the best figures, with the close at net gains of ⅞@1¼c. December was 49⅛@49¼c; May, 54⅛@54⅝c, and July, 55⅝@55⅝c at the last.

There were numerous rumors regarding favorable political developments, but in the main they applied to the stock rather than the grain markets. Pit brokers were not greatly impressed with the upturn in the market, regarding it as due largely to a strong technical position rather than any change in the general situation.

Sentiment Still Bearish.

A majority of the local element continue to express bearish sentiment. There was no improvement in the foreign demand, with sales estimated around 500,000 bu Manitobas. Highly beneficial rains were reported in Argentina, which has been complaining of hot and dry weather in the northern cereal zone for some time past.

February wheat in Buenos Aires, representing the new crop, was quoted around 43c yesterday, or over 11c under the May future in Chicago. The trade looks for increased competition between Argentine and Canadian wheat in the world's market in the immediate future. Harvest is expected to start in the advanced sections in Argentina in about 30 days, with normal weather.

Winnipeg Unchanged.

Hedging pressure in the Canadian market was less in evidence owing to a falling off in interior marketings, and farmers are not selling all of the wheat they deliver. It is estimated around 180,000,000 bu have been delivered so far from the 1932 crop, compared with 82,000,000 bu last year. Liverpool reported a fair demand for futures, with prices ¼@½c higher. December there closed at 54⅞c, or 5⅝c over Chicago.

Outlook for the new Australian wheat crop is favorable, and Broomhall estimates the prospective yield at 200,000,000 bu, or 10,000,000 bu in excess of last year's harvest. Only 5,000,000 bu old wheat remain to be cleared between now and the end of the season.

Export Demand for Corn.

Small lots of cash corn were sold to exporters by Chicago and St. Louis handlers yesterday, but the aggregate amount wasn't sufficient to be a market factor. At the same time the domestic demand was fairly active, with sales of over 200,000 bu here and charters were made for 530,000 bu to Georgian bay and Buffalo. This makes room for over 1,000,000 bu chartered in the last two days, and was taken as indicating local handlers desired to have plenty of grain on hand in the east in order to take care of the prospective demand during the winter.

Corn futures showed fair strength, with scattered commission house and local buying in evidence, and the close was ⅜@⅝c higher, the upturn in wheat having some effect. December closed at 26¼c, May 31⅛@31¼c, and July 32½@32⅝c. The forecast indicated rain and colder weather over a good part of the belt. The new grain is drying out rapidly and two cars of new No. 5 yellow were received here yesterday. They sold at 22¼@22½c.

Oats finished ¼c higher, after a range of around ½c. December was 15⅝c and May 18⅜c at the last. Trade was mainly of a local character. Rye advanced ⅝c and closed with December at 31⅞c and May at 35⅞c, strength in wheat being the main factor.

The hog market yesterday started out a little stronger, but softened again before the session was over, though meager supplies blocked an attempt to cut prices. Both the top and average prices for the day remained unchanged at $3.90 and $3.60, respectively. Trading dragged slowly most of the day, yet the clearance was fairly good in the better grades. Only 2,000 were estimated in the pens at the close.

Since the break early in the week the hog market has maintained a fairly even keel. The average cost has been $3.60 for four consecutive days, while the daily tops in this time have held at $3.85 and $3.90. Extremely heavy "lard" hogs have not been so difficult to sell the last two days as they were earlier in the week.

Supplies have been exceptionally light. Receipts at the 11 leading markets during the first five days of this week at 333,000 show a decrease of 122,000 compared with a year ago, and are 32,000 under 1930.

Cattle Trading Slow.

Trading in cattle yesterday was uninteresting. Only 2,000 arrived on the market and these were of the class that sell largely below $7.50. Only one full load reached the $8.00 line, with 3 steers at $8.25. The trade carried a nominal quotation of $9.75 in the absence of prime medium weight steers.

There has been a slightly better clearance of beef locally and this has done more to halt the break in cattle prices than anything else. Some classes have managed to work back up a little. Butcher stock, for instance, closed the week slightly higher, as did some of the long yearlings that suffered most in last week's break. Most steers closed 25@50c under a week ago. The week's market, as a whole, stands only 15c above the lowest since the week ending July 2.

Lambs Sell Steady.

Steady rates were paid for slaughter lambs yesterday, but the higher quality of offerings boosted prices in some classes. Top weights averaged $4 lbs. at $5.75 and were better than any range lambs on the market Thursday. Natives were handpicked up to $5.90, the bulk of sorted kinds going at $5.25 @5.75. Aged sheep sold steady, old slaughter ewes going to packers at $2.10. Lamb prices this week have advanced 25@40c, while most other classes of ovine stock show little change for the week. Receipts at Chicago this week are smallest since middle of August.

Receipts at Chicago for today are estimated at 300 cattle, 3,000 hogs and 8,000 sheep, against 197 cattle, 2,364 hogs and 2,543 sheep the previous Saturday, and 288 cattle, 12,798 hogs and 11,875 sheep a year ago.

Probable receipts of hogs at Chicago for next Monday are estimated from 24,000 to 32,000. F. Knutzen marketed 24,000, J. M. Waters, R. B. Ellis and H. Pattison, 25,000; G. W. Chandler, W. T. Reneker and H. S. Turner, 27,000; F. M. Sherwood, 28,000; A. G. Welhener, 30,000, and R. Trullinger, H. Wolfe and W. Garrett, 32,000.
